THE VILLAGE OF CHALO 3083

Barlow was tired, being on the road for hours seemed like an eternity, but he'd managed so far and riding this long all day wasn't one of his strong points in regards to his constitution. It's just a pain, he thought, no matter, just a little longer and I'll soon be coming to Chalo—I'm sure Prefect Veska won't mind if I stay the night. Besides I can always trade my lodgings for news from Central City. Arrhh-yes, Central City the unhappy capital of the simian world, where intrigue and political stupidity rule. I much prefer my country village of Kaymak any day, so quiet and peaceful—especially now with my 'games' well established. I just don't really know why Zaius had to drag me all the way from home so he could listen to my report on how Kaymak was developing under my guidance, I could have just sent Zaius a written report and that would be that and be done with it, but oh know, he wanted to listen to what I had to say—such arrogance and narrow-of-mind for an orang-utan, I can hear him now in his self appointed superior viewpoint.

“Barlow, the High Council is a little concerned about your methods you employ in keeping crime at bay, this so called 'Games' you have been doing—how long has it been going...”

“About twenty-three years now Zaius, when I became Prefect of Kaymak I soon realized the humans needed controlling if I were to establish a peaceful and productive village; I have learned that humans—as you yourself know—are an aggressive species, so to curb such emotional tendencies; I created the 'Games', believe me, it has worked wonders”.

“Yes, Kaymak is one of a very few settlements if I may say—that has no human problems, criminal or otherwise. That is why I wanted to speak to you personally this time instead of reviewing your report. The High Council has decided to see for itself these so-called 'Games' in action; so next month I and General Urko will be visiting your village and to experience for ourselves how you have achieved the almost impossible”.

“Thank you Zaius, you will not be disappointed”.

“I hope not Barlow, the High Council is keenly interested, especially Urko, since the outcome of the 'Games' is death”.

“I'm sure General Urko will find it entertaining at best, my current champion, Tolar is admired by all, and will be pleased to put on a show worthy for you, Urko and the Council”.

Worthy indeed...but in reality, pondered Barlow, it was a way for Zaius to hopefully find a way to discredit me. The underlining political currents were there plain as day. Well in that case, I have friends, important influential friends that may see to it that Zaius won't get his way if things get out of hand—politically speaking of course.

—*—*—*—

Barlow entered Chalo about mid morning, as he trotted along the street he saw a human standing a short distance away, a man of about fifty with long white hair tied in a ponytail. As Barlow came near, the human caught his attention.

“You there!” Barlow called out, stopping his horse.

“Yes sir”, said the man, watching the Prefect get down from his mount, who seemed very much relieved in setting foot on firm ground again.

“Can you direct me to Prefect Veska's house?”

“Yes sir, its just down at the end of this main street, you can't miss it”, said the man pointing with his arm extended, showing Barlow where to go.

“Fine, fine; what's your name human?”

“Farrow sir, just Farrow”, looking a bit concerned.

“Good”, Barlow answered, “Take my horse to the stables and give him a rub down and a feed will you, and report back to me—my name is Barlow Prefect Barlow, got that?”

“Yes sir, Prefect Barlow”, feeling a little more at ease, Farrow had a thing for apes, ever since that bad experience when he was about twelve; ever since then he tried to keep away—out of the way whenever he could, but sometimes...“Your horse is in good hands sir, I'll look after him”.

“Excellent, see that you do, he's been with me for many years now”. Barlow commented, humans he surmised, must be kept in their place if they were to be any use to simian society, as he walked off towards Veska's house leaving Farrow to do what he was instructed to do.

—*—*—*—

Farrow was at the stables and had just finished with Barlow's horse when the stable hand by the name of Colan came in. “What have we here Farrow?” the semi-muscular young man questioned, walking over to where Farrow was watching the horse eat.

“This is a special horse Colan; it belongs to a Prefect Barlow who is at Veska's house right now”.

“Oh I see”, looking at Farrow and then at the stallion, “a special horse, hmmm, well I guess I'm honoured”.

“Well anyhow”, trying to change the course of the conversation, “I’d better go and see Barlow and tell him his horse is okay, make sure nothing happens to him, alright?”

“Sure-sure”, Colan replied giving a short wave at Farrow as the old man began walking to the Prefect’s house, “nothing’s going to happen, trust me”.

Nothing’s going to happen, Farrow deliberated, I hope not, or it’ll be my head for sure, all apes think humans are alike, but I know this Barlow will remember me if his horse gets sick, I just know it.

—*—*—*—

Farrow was almost at Prefect Veska’s house when he saw Arno, Veska’s young son with his new birthday present—a dog that he got a few days ago. I don’t like dogs, Farrow reminded himself, I hope it won’t see me and begin to chase me, like it did before. Dogs, what good are they anyway, they just run around, eat and sleep—that’s it. Farrow was near, very near now and with some dutch courage approached the front door in which Arno and his dog were blocking.

“Excuse me kind master but I have business inside, I have to see Prefect Barlow who is with your father”, trying to sound tame, especially with the dog now barking at him.

“Oh very well human, if you must”, Arno replied, sounding disgusted, to the point of impatience, as he moved aside holding his pet, he then as an afterthought decided to go off and play somewhere else, “come on dog let’s go into the woods, maybe we can find some humans to scare”. Farrow saw the pair of them run off in that direction slowing shaking his head as if to say foolish young chimp. But of course he would never say such a thing out loud anyway that’s for sure.

Farrow was about to knock on the front door when it opened, Farrow quickly took a step back as Prefect’s Veska and Barlow stepped outside together. Barlow was first to notice the old man.

“Arrh Farrow isn’t it?” Barlow asked, looking at the human who seemed quite nervous.

“Yes sir, I looked after your horse as you told me, he’s in fine hands”.

“Good, very good”, turning to Veska, “your humans are very well behaved Veska, my compliments”.

“Thank you Barlow, I run this village with an iron hand and strict rules—especially for the humans, it’s the only way to control them and ensure peace and stability. Humans must know their place—it’s the natural order of things...”

“Yes-yes, quite so Veska, quite so, now”, turning back to Farrow, “you may go human”.

“Thank you sir”, giving a little bow and off Farrow went in the direction of the woods.

“He certainly wouldn’t be fit for the ‘Games’, Tolar would just as look at him than touch him to win”.

“I must say”, Veska added, as the two chimpanzees began walking to Barlow’s lodgings for the night, which was just across the road, “these ‘Games’ fascinate me just as much as any news from Central City”.

“Oh please, do come to Chalo when you have the time my friend”, returning the favour of Veska putting him up for the night, Barlow was very proud of his ‘Games’ and wanted as much approval as possible, since Zaius and Urko were coming to view it—probably more for the entertainment value than anything else, “you will not be disappointed, the humans put up quite a show, such an violent species, it really amazes me”.

“Humans”, Veska commented with revulsion, shaking his head, “animals to the bone, if it wasn’t for us, where would they be Barlow...where?”

—*—*—*—

Farrow wanted to distance himself from the Prefects as much as possible by walking as quickly as he could; he decided he had enough grovelling for one day—he hated it. Apes he thought, why must humans suffer their kind, surely we as humans could live a better life? Farrow was deep in his own world and didn’t really know where he was going; he entered the woods and was strolling along a narrow path when he heard a distant sound of a dog barking.

“Oh no”, Farrow said softly to himself, “it’s that chimp and his dog”.

Quickly Farrow began to jog along the path, he wanted to avoid any situation that may-might get him into trouble; Prefect Veska was an ape not known to be lenient with humans and since his son Arno may be involved, Farrow could expect some form of punishment for sure.

Farrow had now started to run more hurriedly when he heard the dog’s barking getting louder, he certainly heard Arno shouting something like, “Come on dog...go get him!”

Farrow wasn’t sure if ‘go get him’ was meant for him, but he wasn’t sticking around to find out. He ran still further, stopping once and awhile to catch his breath and to quickly look around to see if Arno and his dog were near. The barking seemed to be distant—or was it near? Farrow couldn’t really be sure, so he decided to leave the path he was on—Farrow didn’t really know why he was still on it? And headed straight into the thicker part of the woods, where hopefully the trees would hide him somehow and offer protection from the dog.

Farrow kept going just a little while and then he stopped and listened to hear if there was any barking, he heard nothing; good. There was a rock nearby so Farrow decided to go over and sit on it to rest. The experience of being chased by an animal which was considered a higher form of intelligence by the apes was disturbing—if that was the right word—no degrading was more like it. One day, dreamed Farrow, I would like to wake up one morning without the fear of the apes looking over my shoulder, knowing my life hangs in the balance—such as it was. I would like to live in peace, and never have to worry about if I were going to die by a gorilla's bullet in the head.

After a few minutes of respite Farrow got his breath back and perhaps his sanity, he got up, and began to walk back to Chalo when he suddenly tripped and fell to the ground. He mentally cursed himself and started to lift himself up when he noticed something in the bushes; it looked kind of strange eyeing it from ground level. So Farrow finished getting up and cautiously walked over and peered into the bushes pushing them back to have a better look. What he saw was a metal door, similar to the kind of door the village jail uses to lock up any humans who break the law, but it had no small window of bars so the gorillas could look in on the prisoner.

Farrow lightly touched the solid metal door with his fingers and then without any reason gave it a little knock. What was a metal door doing in the middle of nowhere? Farrow mulled over, as he examined the door more closely. By instinct Farrow seeing what seemed to be a handle gave the metal door a push, it moved a little. Unlocked? Farrow's curiosity got the better of him and he pushed the metal door a bit harder and it opened some more, but not enough for Farrow to go through, the metal door seemed very old and showed some signs of rust. If I'm to go through Farrow determined, I'll have to push real hard to see what's inside.

So with a bit more effort Farrow gave it his all, and was rewarded by falling to the ground again, but this time on the other side. Farrow slowly got up wiping some dirt off his face and looked around. It took only a minute or so for the light from the outside to illuminate the room so Farrow could see into it properly. What he saw stunned him, besides the rubble of broken stone littering the floor, bits of twisted metal beams here and there, as well as what seemed to be shelves were wooden boxes—quite a few of them in various sizes, stacked on top of each other, even against the walls.

Farrow walked slowly further into the large room and approached one of the wooden boxes; it didn't seem to be locked, for he couldn't see any bolt or padlock, so Farrow decided to open it, to see what was inside. After a little effort, Farrow opened the lid and saw a covering made of some kind of cloth material, so he pulled it aside and found to his amazement—books...books Farrow mused, how curious. So he took one them and opened it—words, just words; too bad I can't read, Farrow pondered, I wonder what it says? If I was an ape I would have gone to school, and learned how to read and write, but humans...they weren't allowed or intelligent enough to learn—animals didn't need to, it was a waste of time, you were told only what to do, and only how to do it—no more, no less. That was the way—the ape way.

Farrow spent the rest of the day inside the cave-like room, first because it seemed like a good hiding place—especially from Arno and his dog, and it would make a good home to, Farrow never really felt comfortable in Chalo as a place to stay and sleep, even if it was his home—it was all he knew. But now he had a new place, a new home perhaps, and some of the books he looked at had pictures in them. So Farrow began to sort the books from the boxes that had pictures into one pile and the ones without onto another pile, which he could use to burn to make a fire for warmth and cooking. Just as well, if the apes ever find out about this place full of books he'd be killed for sure.

Books were banned, and any humans caught with them were taken away and executed without trial. Books were not meant for humans, only apes were allowed to read books, but even so, Farrow heard—it was rumoured, that certain types of books found in possession by apes were confiscated and given to the High Council itself—to Zaius personally no less. It was also rumoured that humans once wrote books a long time ago, and the apes stopped them. Could these books in this room be human books, books written by man and hidden from the apes? Should he, Farrow not burn some of them, if not all? My life, he reflected, my life...is all I have, if nothing else, why die for something I can't even read or understand?

With that final reflection, Farrow continued to decide which books he would keep and which to burn. He already made up his mind to clean up and move into his secret hiding place away from Chalo and the apes; Farrow would only visit the village to get food and water, and the rest of the time he would be living in his cave protected from the outside world—a world he'd wished he was never born in. A world dominated by the master race—the ape, and where man is the slave—the animal.

Apes have always been the rulers of this land, Farrow contemplated, and humans have always been their slaves, I wish things were different; I wish the humans would be the masters and the apes the animals—for a change, I would like to see how they feel in our shoes—I wish.

Little did Farrow know that at one time the world was dominated by humans and the apes were their slaves, but that was a very long time ago—a...very...long...time...ago.

Royal Dano Biography

Royal Dano was undoubtedly one of the best, most quirky and striking character actors to ever grace the big and small screen alike in a lengthy and impressive career which spanned 42 years.

Dano was born on November 22nd, 1922 in New York. He ran away from home at age 12 and lived in such states as Texas, Florida and California. He struck a deal with his father to continue his education, but still be able to travel around the country.

Dano eventually attended New York University. His performing career began as part of the 44th Special Service Provisional Company during World War II. Dano soon branched out to the New York stage and made his Broadway debut with a small role in the hit musical "Finian's Rainbow." He was nominated by the New York Critic's Circle as one of the Promising Actors of 1949. Tall and lean, with a gaunt face, dark hair, a rangy build, and a very distinctive deep croaky voice, Dano was usually cast in both movies and TV shows as gloomy and/or sinister characters. He appeared most often in westerns and worked several times with James Stewart and director Anthony Mann.

FILM AND TV ROLES

Royal Dano made his film debut in "Undercover Girl." His more memorable roles include the Tattered Soldier in "The Red Badge of Courage," a sickly bookworm bad guy in "Johnny Guitar," Peter in "King of Kings," a cattle rustler in "The Culpepper Cattle Company," a profanity-spewing preacher in "Big Bad Mama," Ten Spot in "The Outlaw Josey Wales," a weary factory line worker in "Take This Job and Shove It," a lightening rod salesman in "Something Wicked This Way Comes," a stuffy high school teacher in "Teachers," a cantankerous farmer in "Killer Klowns from Outer Space," and, in his last part, a cemetery caretaker in George Romero's "The Dark Half."

Among the numerous TV shows Dano did guest spots on are "Twin Peaks," "Amazing Stories," "CHiPs," "Quincy M.E.," "Fantasy Island," "Little House on the Prairie," "Kung Fu," "Ben Casey," "Planet of the Apes," "Cannon," "Playhouse 90," "Lost in Space," "Gunsmoke," "Bonanza," "Wagon Train," "The Virginian," "Hawaii Five-O," "Alfred Hitchcock Presents," "Wanted; Dead or Alive," "Night Gallery," "Route 66," "The Rifleman," and "Rawhide."

BEST FILMS

Dano is best remembered for his supporting roles in a number of 1950s western and mystery films, but achieved cult status for his roles in three films in particular. In "The 7 Faces of Dr. Lao" (1964), he portrayed Carey.

With no spoken dialogue (only one solo song), Dano was unforgettable as the saddened, unnamed preacher in "The Right Stuff" (1983).

Dano also had a memorable (if short) role as the coroner in "Electra Glide in Blue" (1973), who gets into a loud shouting match with Robert Blake's character.

Dano is also remembered fondly by his most ardent fans for his comedic performance as a rascally zombified old-timer, Gramps an undead gold prospector, in the horror/suspense/comedy/Aztec adventure "House II: The Second Story".

One of his final roles, the one for which he is best remembered by younger audiences, was as Wrenchmuller in 1990's "Spaced Invaders" (which has become a Halloween classic).

He also made a strong impression as the doom-predicting Elijah in John Huston's film version of Moby Dick, memorably intoning to Richard Basehart as Ishmael, "A day will come when you'll smell land and there'll be no land, and on that day, Ahab will go to his grave, but he'll rise again within the hour. He will rise and beckon! Then all - all save one - shall follow!"

TRIVA

Royal Dano did the voice of the audioanimatronic Abraham Lincoln for Walt Disney's "Hall of Presidents" for both Disneyland and Disney World. Dano also provided the voice for the first Presidents exhibit at the World's Fair 1960.

Dano too provided the voice of Disney's audioanimatronic Abraham Lincoln in "Great Moments with Mister Lincoln," presented as part of the State of Illinois pavilion during the 1964-65 New York World's Fair. Walt Disney personally selected Dano, because he felt the actor came closest to the historical descriptions of Lincoln's voice. The "Great Moments" program was moved to Disneyland in 1965, and Dano's vocals continued to be a part of the program until 2001

In 1971, Dano's voice was again used for a revised Lincoln speech in the new "Hall Of Presidents" program at Walt Disney World in Florida, which ran to 1993.

Dano also portrayed Lincoln on the "Omnibus" television series.

He's the father of actor Richard Dano.

Royal Dano died at age 71 of a heart attack on May 15th, 1994.

PERSONAL QUOTES

A Hispanic gentleman named Armando purchases a female chimpanzee named Heloise, intending to open a circus. It will take him another seven years to fulfil that dream. (Escape)

Armando reveals that he bought Heloise seven years earlier (1966), long before opening the circus in 1971.

Intending to work in the entertainment industry, Armando drops his last name, legally registering himself under the stage-name of 'Señor Armando'.

From the novelisation of the "Conquest of the Planet of the Apes".

1967

---

Alan Virdon's son, Chris, is born. As a child, he grows up on his family's farm in Houston, Texas.

This is speculation based on the photograph of Virdon's family in "Escape from Tomorrow" and "The Legacy". The boy in the picture seems to be about 13 years old. Virdon states that he had a son about the age of Kraik in "The Legacy". The actor who played Kraik was 13 at the time. The name of Virdon's son is from "The Good Seeds".

Information comes from the "Planet of the Apes Concept Guide".

--

As Chris Virdon grows up, his father teaches him all he knows about farming—particularly the importance of planting the best seeds to insure the health of next year's crop. On the farm, Virdon watches veterinarians work to get familiar with birthing and other techniques. As such, he learns how to help a cow in labour whose calf has turned around in the womb.

From the episode "The Good Seeds".

1969

---

July 20 NASA successfully lands a man on the Moon.

"That's one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind". Neil Armstrong, American astronaut.

August 20 ANSA (American National Space Administration) is born.

Due to the success of the first moon landing in July, ANSA is commissioned by the President as a parallel division of NASA to develop a new prototype spacecraft to help explore interstellar space. This ambitious project to go beyond our solar system is named: The Icarus Program.

The aim of ANSA is to develop protocols, procedures and technologies to advance interstellar spaceflight to go beyond the solar system. ANSA's first target is Alpha Centauri.

--

ANSA's first Director is Dr. Otto Hasslein.

September Colonel George Taylor volunteers for the ANSA Interstellar Space Program.

Classified Information: Taylor was one of the test pilots that flew the Icarus Prototype.

1950's - 1960's

---

After the Cuban Crisis in 1962 President Kennedy commissioned the military to investigate, propose and design a new form of weapon to protect the United States from all possible enemies, the military begins investing their efforts in creating the 'Alpha-Omega' Bomb, a cobalt-encased atomic missile also known as the "doomsday bomb" able to destroy the entire world. The weapon's name comes from Revelations 22:13 in The Bible: "I am the Alpha and the Omega, the First and the Last, the Beginning and the End." Only those with top security clearance know of the project's existence, among them ANSA astronaut George Taylor. (Beneath)

Since in "Beneath" that Taylor knows of the project's existence, it must have originated before the launch of the Astræa in February 1972.

Alan Virdon passes his Electronics Lab One course despite accidentally sitting on an awl during class.

From the script, "Hostage" written early in the series, but was never filmed. It is unclear if Virdon is relating an event from high school or college, so dating can not be more specific.

Peter Burke spends his childhood in Jersey City, where he never sees the stars at night. Still, he longs some day to be out there among them.

From the episode "Escape from Tomorrow".

As a child, Peter attends P.S. 103 in Jersey City.

From the episode "The Surgeon".

Peter's mother Mary often tells him the Biblical story of Isaac and his twin sons, Jacob and Esau, hoping to instill in him the importance of avoiding deception.

From the episode "The Deception".

The name of Burke's mother Mary comes from the Fan Fiction story "Echoes of the Past" by Cassidy Rae.

Peter's father, meanwhile, often tries to teach him an important lesson by asking, "Son, when the going gets tough, and the tough get going, what will you do?"

This information comes from the novelization of the episode, "The Deception" entitled Planet of the Apes #2: Escape to Tomorrow.

Peter is one of three children, with two sisters. His family also has a dog, though young Peter would prefer that they had two dogs and one sister.

From the script, "Hostage" written early in the series, but was never filmed.

Peter pitches a no-hitter game of baseball while in high school.

From the episode "Up Above the World so High".

1970

---

January Peter Burke enters Michigan State University and becomes a running back for the football team and takes R.O.T.C. classes.

Virdon calls Burke 'a Michigan Running Back' in "The Good Seeds". It is safe to speculate he enrolled in R.O.T.C. because he is a Major by 1980.

Peter Burke majors in Computer Science.

This information comes from the Fan Fiction story "Evol-Q-tion" by Dayton Ward.

Peter Burke also gets a Bachelors' Degree in Astrophysics and a Masters' in Aeronautic Engineering.

This information comes from the Fan Fiction story "Land Before Time" by SSS979.

During his junior year of college, Pete Burke makes a particularly unpopular play during a game against Ohio State.

This information comes from the novelization of "The Gladiator" from Planet of the Apes #4: Lord of the Apes.

October 07 Bruce MacDonald is born.

This is based on Austin Stoker's age in 1973 (Battle); minus the 2018 movie timeline date minus 18 years. Stoker was actually born in 1943.

Macdonald's first name is found in Marvel's film adaptation of "Battle".

In another timeline 1976 was mentioned as Bruce MacDonald's year of birth, which would make him 15 or 16 in 1991, which I consider too young to be 'responsible' for information as important to Ape Management as a Supervisor for the Archive Section; so I decided that 20 would be a better age.

1971

---

The President of the United States hand-picks one of his officers, ANSA astronaut Colonel George Taylor, to head the IEP (Interstellar Exploration Program) mission to Alpha Centauri.

This information is provided in the film's novelization "Escape from the Planet of the Apes".

'Armando's Old Time Circus' is formed. (Conquest)

"I run a circus". Armando tells.

"We know that". Kolp responds.

"From 20 years back". Hoskyns informs.

1972

---

January Dr. Otto Hasslein is appointed by the President to be his Senior Scientific Adviser.

January 14 Astronauts Colonel George Taylor, Lieutenants Robert Landon, Mathew Dodge, and Catherine Stewart are launched on the Astræa the first interstellar exploration flight to Alpha Centauri from Cape Kennedy. The crew enters suspended animation for the long voyage to 'somewhere in Orion's belt'. The mission is launched amid high support from the nation and the world. (Planet of the Apes)

A date of January 8 is also mentioned in "Hasslein Observed Time Line" and January 14 is mentioned in "ANSA Mission Profile" on the 'Last flight of the Icarus' website, but January 14 is the official date of the Astræa's launch.

February It is mid-February and the Astræa mysteriously drops out of communications and deep space surveillance under mysterious circumstances. The media has a field day and the government institutes several special investigations into ANSA protocols.

Later, it will be discovered that at near FTL (Faster-Than-Light) velocities, the Astræa has created/entered a Hasslein Curve in space/time and was thrown several thousand years into the future. ANSA hurriedly readies a rescue team to be dispatched along Taylor's last known trajectory.

Taylor says in 'Planet' that the Astræa has been in deep space for six months, it is assumed that their mission/tour was for this long and was returning home to Earth.

March 14 Astronauts Colonel Lyndon Maddox and Major John Brent are launched in the Aurora along the same flight path as the Astræa to probe its unexplained disappearance from detection. (Beneath the Planet of the Apes)

Some POTA Timelines state September, October or November (Marvel #11 1975) as the month of rescue, but this doesn't make sense, why wait 7-9 months to launch a 'hurriedly' rescue mission? So I reduced it down to two months to allow investigation of the Astræa's disappearance and the preparation of Aurora's launch.

I gave Maddox a first name since he had none in "Beneath".

In Peter Burke's senior year of college, during the final quarter of a game between Michigan and Michigan State, with a score of 14-14, Burke experiences a moment of panic when the punter kicks the ball his way. As the ball soars through the air, Burke sees the other team's linemen running toward him and has a moment of panic.

This information comes from the novelization of "The Cure" from Planet of the Apes #1: Man the Fugitive.

1972 - 1980

---

Space exploration expands, with unmanned probes ranging to the stars and back thanks to Hasslein's discovery of faster-than-light travel. Manned flights over vast distances also become more common. Unfortunately, Earth governments grow more totalitarian to cope with increasing economic, political and energy pressures. All information regarding the Astræa and the Aurora (To avoid public curiosity, the government issues a press release claiming Taylor and Brent's ships both disintegrated in orbit) and the secrets about the future, as revealed by Zira and Cornelius, is locked away under heavy security clearance, and the "talking chimpanzee" story is publicly denounced as a hoax.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

This probably explains why Virdon and Burke were initially surprised that they crash-landed on a planet with talking apes, only to realize the truth, when they found out they were back on Earth.

San Francisco begins powering its Bay Area Rapid Transit subway trains with nuclear energy. The subway stations are illuminated with lights powered by solar energy batteries, with light bulbs that can never burn out which draw electricity from large solar shields on the surface. At least one such shield survives the next millennium intact. Other innovations at the time include "a meal in a pill," eaten three times daily in place of food for full vitamin content with no caloric intake; painless organ replacement in a day for instant health, thanks to a company called CA<sup>3</sup>; disposable clothing, meant to be worn, then washed down the drain; and Cefaloradion's Electronic Neurological Monitor (ENM), a device hooked up to the head to provide ENT (Electronic Neurological Treatment) for emotional stability to the distressed.

Some details of the products can be seen on screen on posters in a subway station in the episode "The Trap"; as Burke tells Urko the wonders of his time, while others are available in the script.

During this period, Dr. Walter Mather, F.A.C.S., of the Hanson Clinic develops a reputation as one of the greatest surgeons of his era. Peter Burke is familiar with his work.

This information comes from the novelization of "The Surgeon" from Planet of the Apes #2: Escape to Tomorrow.

Dr. Mather writes a medical reference book entitled Principles of Surgery, containing detailed explanations of human anatomy, as well as a variety of advanced surgical techniques.

From the episode "The Surgeon".

Burke considers purchasing a bar in Jersey City, but ultimately opts not to buy it.

From the novelization of "The Good Seed" from Return to the Planet of the Apes #2: Escape From Terror Lagoon, erroneously places the bar in Galveston.

Burke dates a woman named Susan, enjoying many picnics and romantic moments with her. Despite her attempts to get him to talk more about his past, he keeps his emotional distance from her, causing the relationship ultimately to end.

From the episode "The Interrogation".

Major Alan J. Virdon, Lieutenants' Peter J. Burke and Stephen B. Jones are assigned to Edwards Air Force Base, as astronauts-in-training they serve under an officer named Major Jennings. His nose is so large and crooked that one of them names a nearby hill "Jennings' Nose" due to its remarkable similarity. The name sticks, but luckily for them, Jennings never finds out who coined it.

This information comes from the novelization of "The Tyrant" from Planet of the Apes #4: Lord of the Apes, with the exception of Stephen B. Jones.

Alan Viridon is promoted to Colonel, he along with Captains' Peter Burke and Stephen Jones enter the ANSA Interstellar Space Program and begin training for the mission to Alpha Centauri.

Viridon's rank is established in "The Legacy".

1973

---

January Peter Burke Graduates from College and enters the US Air Force.

During his military training, Peter Burke hates the hours spent running on a treadmill.

This information appears only in the script of "The Cure".

As part of that training, Burke is subjected to a mock interrogation to see how he holds up. An American officer, Lt. Hal Martin, poses as an enemy agent and tries to make him incriminate his battle group commander, Col. Perry, and company commander, Capt. Logan. Burke resists, providing only his name, rank and serial number (0-0-4-7-3-6-6-8-9-7).

This scene appears in the script, but not in the final televised episode of "The Interrogation".

April NASA astronauts Bill Hudson, Jeff Allen and Judy Franklin enter the space program.

From the episode "Flames of Doom".

Hudson enters the program a few days before the others and is named mission commander. The trio forms a very close bond as they train and work together. Allen's ancestry as a Black man makes him sensitive to racial inequality, but their colour difference—Hudson and Franklin are both Caucasians—never becomes an issue between them.

This information comes from the novelization of the "Tunnel of Fear", entitled Return to the Planet of the Apes #2: Escape from Terror Lagoon.

May 08 Lisa (Caesar's future wife) is born.

Natalie Trundy who portrayed Lisa in "Conquest" and "Battle" was born in 1940. So logically I decided to make her character the same age as Caesar to fit this timeline.

December 26 The Astræa reappears mysteriously within nearby space. It lands off the southern California coast, slightly north of San Clemente and is met by mobilized United States Navy spaceflight recovery crews.

The date is arrived at because in the movie Zira and the Chairman of the Presidential Commission clearly state the year of 1973. But the President also states "Yesterday, a US spacecraft splashed down off the southern California coast. It was one of two that have been missing in space for over two years now. To be exact, the one commanded by Colonel Taylor..." So by putting all this information together, the best and closest date to fit all three statements satisfactory is the above.

Also the timeline in Marvel's # 11 places Escape in April 1973, a year and two months after Taylor's ship was lost. Compounding the confusion, Marvel's adaptation places the film in 1975. But I have followed the movie's timeline as close as possible as stated above.

The Astræa is found to be piloted by three speaking chimpanzees that identify themselves as Doctors' Cornelius, Zira and Milo. The apes are first taken to the nearby military air base and then to the Los Angeles Zoo. They are met by two animal psychiatrists, Doctors' Lewis Dixson and Stephanie Branton. (Escape)

December 27 Dr. Milo is killed by a gorilla. (Escape)

"Through an unfortunate accident, one of them was killed early this morning, in the Los Angeles Zoo." President of the United States.

December 28 Cornelius and Zira are brought before the First Presidential Commission and are accepted as friends of the planet Earth. (Escape)

"I have therefore decided to convene a Presidential Commission of Inquiry in Los Angeles, tomorrow. The two surviving apes will be presented to the Commission..." President of the United States.

December 29 Second Presidential Commission is held in secret session. (Escape)

"...they will not be required to appear before the Commission tomorrow..." Bill Bonds.

Cornelius and Zira move into the Beverly Wilshire hotel. (Escape)

"...they will, however, be taken from the zoo infirmary to a hotel..." Bill Bonds.

December 30 Zira lectures at the "Bay Area Women's Club", and goes to the Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History with Dr. Hasslein.

"...tomorrow, Zira is to speak at the 'Bay Area Women's Club', and later, she'll accompany Dr. Hasslein to the 'Museum of Natural History'..." Newscaster.

Cornelius goes to the "fights" with Dr. Lewis Dixon.

"...meanwhile, Cornelius will attend a prizefight..." Newscaster.

Through underhanded interrogation and analysis of the Astræa, Dr. Hasslein gets Zira drunk and learns of the ultimate fate of the human race and the planet.

Dr. Hasslein convinces the President that the apes are a threat to Mankind, and orders another Presidential Commission.

That evening, the Third Presidential Commission held is secret session. (Escape)

"...the ape-onauts will in fact be escorted by Dr. Lewis Dixon to the installation known as Camp Eleven and held there, in his care, for interrogation by the CIA under the guidance and supervision of Dr. Otto Hasslein..." Chairman.

December 31 The next morning Cornelius and Zira are taken to a military base known as Camp XI for further interrogation.

Under interrogation, Cornelius and Zira reveal mankind's downfall and Apekind's rise.

Under sodium pentothal, Zira reveals the treatment of humans at the hands of apes.

The Fourth Presidential Commission is held in secret session.

"...the Commission unanimously recommends that the birth of the female ape's unborn child should be prevented; and that, after its prenatal removal, both the male and the female should humanely be rendered incapable of bearing another..." Chairman.

That evening, in their quarters, Cornelius accidentally kills their orderly and they escape.

Zira begins labor.

Dr. Stephanie Branton helps Cornelius and Zira by bringing them to "Armando's Circus".

Zira gives birth to Milo. (Escape From the Planet of the Apes)

Chimpanzees have a pregnancy period of between 33-34 weeks (231-238 days) the average being 231.5 days. Thus it clearly shows that Zira was already pregnant before she, Cornelius and Milo left the Earth.

"How long have you known?" Hasslein questions.

"Since before the war" Zira answers.

If the Earth was not destroyed, Milo would have been born on the 5th of February 3979.

An Oil Magnate, wishing to live like a 16th century Baron, builds a castle near Oakland California.

Virдон relates this information in "The Legacy".

1974

---

January 01 Next morning Dr. Hasslein orders an intensified search for Cornelius and Zira.

"...I want you to mount a systematic an immediate search of every zoo, every menagerie, every circus..." Hasslein orders.

That evening, Lewis and Stephanie help Cornelius and Zira hide in the McKinley & Son derelict shipyard. (Escape From the Planet of the Apes)

January 02 Next morning, Dr. Hasslein discovers Cornelius and Zira on the derelict ship, who kills Milo and fatally wounds Zira. Cornelius seeing this shoots and kills Dr. Hasslein, who is then shot by the police. (Escape From the Planet of the Apes)

January 09 Dr. Noel Stanton takes over as Director of ANSA after the 'mysterious' death of Dr. Otto Hasslein, and begins researching his 'Theory of Time Thrust' claiming humans can propel themselves into the future if they travel fast enough.

From the episode "Flames of Doom".

January 31 Armando packs up his circus. (Escape From the Planet of the Apes)

"...In a month, in just one month, we move on to our winter quarters in Florida..." Armando informs.

Before their fateful day of Cornelius and Zira's death, Zira swaps Milo for Salome's baby chimpanzee at Armando's circus; thus ensuring Milo's survival under Armando's care.

Astronauts Colonel Edward Jackson, Lieutenant John Van Lowen and Lieutenant Terry Maxwell are launched by the ANSA's third interstellar space flight the Pegasus to Alpha Centauri.

The names of the astronauts comes from the Fan Fiction story "Prelude" by Dave Ballard, except the name of the Colonel which is given by Peter Karsten.

1975

---

Astronauts Captain Bill Hudson, Lieutenant Jeff Allen and Lieutenant Judy Franklin are assigned to the Icarus Program under ANSA guidelines.

1976

---

August 06 Astronauts Captain Bill Hudson, Lieutenant Jeff Allen, and Lieutenant Judy Franklin are launched by the ANSA's fourth interstellar space flight the Venturer that heads towards Alpha Centauri.

The Venturer is a very advanced design NASA capsule equipped to fully utilize Dr. Stanton's 'Theory of Time Thrust', but while Hudson was reporting on its effects the Venturer enters a strange energy distortion and disappears going forward in time. (Animated TV Series)

The date above is from the Venturer's chronometer.

The Venturer was not going to Alpha Centauri as such in past missions, but was part of the ANSA Icarus Program which was testing the 'Theory of Time Thrust' while heading out in the direction of Alpha Centauri, when it disappeared.

The Venturer was a test ship that ANSA appropriated from NASA, thus that is why it still had the NASA logo on the vessel.

The Venturer crew fails to return from its mission and is presumed dead. NASA and ANSA erect stone busts of the astronauts in New York City to honour them.

From the episode "The Unearthly Prophecy".

November Stephen Jones marries his childhood sweetheart Debbie.

It is speculation that they married ten months before the birth of their daughter Michelle. Debbie, the name of Jones' wife is given by Carol Davis in her Fan Fiction story "Countdown". In another Fan Fiction story "Values" by Dave Ballard, the name of Jones' wife is Rita; but Carol's is more detailed, thus Debbie will be the official name for this Timeline.

1977

---

August 06 Stephen Jones' daughter, Michelle, is born.

The name of Jones' daughter is given by Carol Davis in her Fan Fiction story "Countdown".

1978

---

ANSA astronauts' Colonel Alan J. Viridon and newly promoted Majors' Peter J. Burke and Stephen B. Jones serve together on a manned mission to Titan. Along the way, they sample banana sundaes supplied by ANSA, which taste so bad the men later remember them as being one of the worst things they've ever eaten.

This information comes from the novelization of "The Surgeon" from Planet of the Apes #2: Escape to Tomorrow, with the exception of Stephen B. Jones.

Burke's rank is established in "The Interrogation".

1979

---

December Dr. Noel Stanton resigns as Director of ANSA, as pressure mounts from Congress to terminate the Icarus Program.

1980

---

January Dr. Jameson Hughes becomes the new Director of ANSA.

August After a pre-flight indoctrination, Virdon and Burke enjoy a relaxing couple of days at Hanson Point, on the shore of California. Virdon's wife Sally is there, along with Burke's date, a redhead named Jam Adams. Smitten with her, Burke carves her initials in a cave on the beach. Though Burke is a ladies' man, Jan is the only woman whose initials he ever carves anywhere.

This information comes from the novelization of "The Deception" from Planet of the Apes #2: Escape to Tomorrow. The script places this incident at Pebble Beach.

August 19 Astronauts Colonel Alan Virdon, Major Peter Burke and Major Stephen Jones are launched by the ANSA's fifth and final interstellar space flight the Hyperion to Alpha Centauri.

The date above is from the Hyperion's chronometer from the opening credits.

As the ship approaches Alpha Centauri, it travels through "radioactive turbulence" and goes out of control. Is this a Hasslein Curve? Virdon directs Jones to activate the automatic homing device.

The Icarus Program is officially terminated shortly after the Hyperion leaves Earth, making it the last attempt to reach for Alpha Centauri. Unofficially the Icarus Program still exists under a different program and is kept under tight security.

1982

---

June Milo, aged 8<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>, begins his bareback riding acrobatics with 'Armando's Old Time Circus', with political repression, the smaller circuses are forced to play to dwindling country audiences, thus helping Milo avoid dangerous publicity.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

Marvel's chronology places this event in 1980, but I have adjusted the year to fit in with "Escape" and this Timeline.

1983

---

The year of the Plague.

The Plague kills all the cats and dogs of the world.

A statue of a dog and a cat, the Pet Memorial, is erected in San Diego to commemorate the loss of man's best friends. Humans and most other animals are unaffected by the plague at this time. (Conquest of the Planet of the Apes)

"They all died within a few months, eight years ago, every dog and cat in the world. It was like a plague..." Armando tells.

"The disease that killed them was a mysterious virus, brought back from outer space by the astronauts" Armando explains.

The year is based on "Conquest" minus the 1991 movie timeline date.

Author's Original Theory: The year of the Plague from space was possibly brought back to Earth by Taylor's ship the Astræa when it returned from the future with Cornelius, Zira and Milo. When the hatch opened it released a slow-acting air-borne virus that germinated and spread from the Upper atmosphere before dispersing itself throughout the planet over the years, finally accumulating in concentrated form to cause a worldwide epidemic, infecting and killing all cats and dogs in a matter of weeks.

1984 - 1991

Humanity faces the first repercussions of the plague. Anxious to replace their lost pets, humans turn to small primates, birds, lizards and other creatures. As the most useful and easiest to train, the primates gradually become the most common household animal.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

The first primates taken as pets include marmosets and Tarsier monkeys.

This information comes from Marvel's comic adaptation of the "Conquest of the Planet of the Apes".

Eventually, man begins taking apes as pets. Though not as intelligent as man, apes are 20 times' smarter than cats and dogs, and they learn quickly from living in human homes. (Escape)

Gradually, man takes in larger and larger simians. In this generation of primates, the plague's genetic effects first manifest: their stature increases, as does intelligence in the larger orders.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

The primitive apes begin to understand the languages of their human masters and quickly evolve from simply performing tricks to performing services. (Escape)

--

The U.S. government becomes increasingly more authoritarian. A reverse migration of people from the suburbs into the cities results in large towns devolving into feudal ports surrounded by farmlands known as provinces. With this increase in governmental structure, however, a slave class develops—the apes, who have shown a marked ability to learn such simple tasks as running errands and cleaning houses.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

Thus Ape Management is incorporated as a semi-public branch of the Government in late 1989, and then by 1991 Ape Management becomes a thriving institution, now fully government operated, with a huge range of responsibilities including being given the sole task of rudimentarily conditioning apes.

The Ape Management's training and day-to-day life with humans brings on an acceleration in the mental development of the apes. Those slow to learn are subjected to a cruel form of punishment called "reconditioning". All apes resistant to reconditioning are summarily destroyed.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

Ape Management passes Article 4, Paragraph 9, making it a punishable crime for an ape to commit an overt act of disobedience. (Conquest)

But over time, ape disobedience increases, and Ape Management's reconditioning complex grows overcrowded with rebellious simians. To deal with the problem, Breck orders the creation of the Achilles List, a document naming every ape that has committed an overt act of disobedience during the past year under Article 4, Paragraph 9. (Conquest)

--

Due to rising levels of pollution, the air in California becomes increasingly un-breathable.

This information is provided in the "Conquest of the Planet of the Apes" novelization.

To bring the pollution level in the provinces under control and clean California's air, the U.S. government builds a massive air-purification plant in the Rocky Mountains.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

As the California air becomes increasingly un-breathable, however, so the government constructs a series of huge air-scrubbing plants along a mountain chain a hundred miles east of San Diego.

By 1989 the last of a series of huge air-scrubbing plants is constructed in California at a cost of billions of dollars, along a mountain chain one hundred miles east of San Diego. In conjunction with stringent laws, the plants make the air in this part of the state breathable again.

This information is provided in the "Conquest of the Planet of the Apes" novelization.

As the U.S. government grows more oppressive, businessmen find it increasingly difficult to make money. The space program falls out of favour and the supersonic transport industry shuts down completely. Synthetic alloy companies only continue to make money by selling directly to the government. Hydroponic farming is seen as the future of industry.

This information is provided in the "Conquest of the Planet of the Apes" novelization.

The U.S. government deems it a crime to show disrespect to a State official.

This information comes from Marvel's comic adaptation of the "Conquest of the Planet of the Apes".

The U.S. government builds a network of trans-national transport tubes, designed to facilitate the movement of people and supplies from one coast to the other.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

1986

---

A book on brain washing techniques is published. In the years that follow, it is placed into a time capsule where it will be discovered a millennia later by Wanda.

Wanda discusses the book in "The Interrogation".

1988

---

January Jason Breck becomes Governor of New York; he eventually gains more political influence and power and establishes his seat of authority in the newly built suburb of 'Century City'. By 1989 he helps instigate Ape Management to strengthen his position and control over the state with the hopes of gaining more wealth throughout the country by the use of the 'Ape Training Centers'. (Battle)

After Jason Breck becomes Governor he assigns Malcolm MacDonald as his Personal Assistant into his Administration. (Battle)

1990

---

Astronauts Colonel William James Richards, Major Kyle Petersen Smith, Major Laureen Anne Harden and Dr. Natalie Almira Merryll are launched by the ANSA's sixth interstellar space flight the Nemesis, but not to Alpha Centauri.

Their mission is to go into the future and prevent the destruction of the Earth by reconfiguring the 'Alpha-Omega' bomb.

From the Fan Fiction story "Resurrection of the Planet of the Apes" by Peter Karsten.

1991

---

January Bruce MacDonald, with the help his older brother is assigned as a Supervisor of the Archives Section of 'Century City' to help promote and develop his abilities within Ape Management.

December 31 Armando and Milo arrive at a North American metropolis known as 'Century City' via a helicopter.

While handing out circus leaflets, Milo observes his fellow apes being treated as slaves and servants of the humans.

After an outburst seeing an ape being beaten Milo runs off.

Armando is arrested and interrogated by Governor Breck.

Milo as instructed by Armando hides in an incoming shipment of orang-utans.
(Conquest of the Planet of the Apes)

"...after twenty years you've picked-up evolved habits from me..." Armando informs.

This date is arrived at because it most closely satisfies both the opening super 'North America 1991' and the Newscaster's dialog "...20 years ago..."

Even though in the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes", places the film in April 1991, and in Marvel's comic adaptation which sets the film in late November 1991.

It is more than likely that the movie's date was based on the year of "Escape's" movie release in 1971. When perhaps it should have been 1993 instead of 1991, which would make more sense.

1992

---

January 01 The next morning, Milo begins his slave training.

There is a two-week time period from Milo's Slave Training to the Breeding Annex, before he is bought at auction by Breck, this information appears in the film's novelization.

January 14 Milo is sold to Governor Breck at an ape auction.

Governor Breck shows Milo a dictionary to help him choose a name for himself; Milo selects the name of Caesar.

Governor Breck then orders Caesar to be assigned to 'Command Post'.

That night, Armando falls to his death during his 'supposedly' release from interrogation. Caesar finding this out begins his plans for 'Ape Revolution'.

January 15 The next morning, Caesar instigates his fellow apes to begin rebelling; and starts to gather confederate apes, arms and explosives to help the 'Ape Revolution'.

January 22 Inspector Kolp realizes that the shipment Caesar came in should have no chimpanzees.

Governor Breck orders Caesar to be brought in.

Caesar is found and is interrogated by an electrical torture device to make him talk.

"Have pity". Caesar begs.

Inspector Kolp commands that Caesar be electrocuted via Governor Breck's orders.

MacDonald saves Caesar's life by tampering with the electrical torture device to help him escape.

Caesar now puts his 'Ape Revolution' into action.

Governor Breck orders a 'shoot to kill' to contain the ape uprising.

Caesar's 'Ape Revolution' is successful as he captures Breck's 'Command Post' and takes him hostage. (Conquest of the Planet of the Apes)

This date is arrived at because it is assumed that Caesar would take about a week to put his plans into action.

---

The fall of Mankind begins. (Conquest of the Planet of the Apes)

1992 - 2006

---

Within a fourteen-year period Caesar helps and leads his people from the city into the provinces, in this case upper New York State.

Here, Caesar attempts to build and establish a new home for his people with the aid of a few human advisors. Massive educational/agricultural programs within the community are developed.

They face little harassment within this time because elsewhere in the country and perhaps the rest of the world, the 'Ape Rebellion' takes hold and is spreading causing political unrest, tension and instability. The Government's breakdown has begun and it cannot police itself as in the past.

In the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes", it is stated that Caesar leads his followers into the provinces along San Francisco peninsula; but since 'Conquest' is based in New York, the location change was obvious.

Tension grows, until...

It is not known what happened to Governor Breck after Century City's downfall.

2000

---

At some point prior to the Nuclear Holocaust, scientists of the Oakland Science Institute, predicting that Humanity is on the verge of entering a dark age, builds secret repository vaults throughout the country.

Into computers stored in these vaults, they upload the sum total of human knowledge for future generations to access, creating a holographic recording of an elderly scientist to explain the vaults' contents to anyone who finds them. One such repository is hidden in the basement of the Oakland Science Institute, a government think-tank in Oakland, California.

From the episode "The Legacy".

2006

Nuclear War.

"...the surface of the world was ravaged by the vilest war in human history. The great cities of the world split asunder and were flattened..." Lawgiver.

"If we shoot, we break twelve years of peace." Mendez.

Other timelines put 1992 and 1993 as the year of the nuclear war.

Widespread nuclear war devastates Earth's surface. History does not record who started it, leaving future generations to wonder if it was the work of a single madman, international political pressure or a rival country taking advantage of the United States' governmental paralysis.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

The war is swift and effective. Major U.S. cities are levelled, though laser-defence ABM systems prevent the war from destroying all life. The surrounding areas remain liveable to a degree, but the cities of the United States become vast irradiated deserts. The ape government prohibits its citizens from entering these areas, which the Lawgiver (Caesar) deems Forbidden Zones.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

New York and San Francisco are both obliterated in the war. A few cities remain partially intact, populated in some areas by "normal" humans, in others by irradiated mutants. (Battle)

Areas around the cities are wastelands for several miles; these areas will eventually be called Forbidden Zones, both due to the radiation (likely neutron bombs were used or even in the future they would be impassable) and the fact that the apes equate human cities with their period of slavery.

2006 - 2018

Post-War, the human population of North America is left in a state of shock.

There is little or no communication over great distances, so Caesar's community, now completely isolated, accepts the survivors in its area and a new ape/human society begins to grow. Despite Caesar's ideals, humans become effectively second-class citizens, and cultural divisions among the apes begin to develop. A gorilla named Aldo declares himself General and begins to train an "army" of gorilla soldiers.

During this time residual radiation is having its effect on both humans and apes. The Plague-altered genes of the apes increase their already rapid intellectual development, in some cases (i.e., Virgil and Mandemus) incredibly so. Humans tend to become more docile, less given to action when angered.

It is not clear at this time whether that is a radiation effect, Plague effect or just living with the evolved apes, the weakest of whom could kill the average human easily.

Many documents are lost in the war, destroying all records of the plague's cause.

In the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes", these events are between 1992 to 2001, based on its incorrect placement of 'Battle' in 2001, instead of 2018 within this timeline.

--

Some pockets of sentient humanity resist the plague's effects in North America, including bands of irradiated mutants who take refuge in the rubble of major cities, while healthy humans gather in tribes across the planet. Humanity's fall from the top of the evolutionary hill is complete. (Battle)

--

Other mutant bands crop up around the country as a result of the radiation. A quintet of giant brains, bodiless save for vast nutrient-globes, forms a group consciousness (the Gestalt Mind) in the caverns beneath San Francisco. This entity calls itself the Inheritors, and its leader is Be-One, with other Supreme Gestalt Commanders similarly named: Be-Two, Be-Three, Be-Four Be-Five and so on—each with a unique, distinctive personality. Other mutated brains are kept in frozen storage in case any of the five are damaged. The Inheritors' origin is unrecorded.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

--

Mutated by close proximity to the nuclear disaster, Inspector Kolp and his commandos take over the remains of 'Century City' New York and the surrounding city areas. There, the mutants live a scavenger existence full of repressed hatred for the apes.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

In order to give this time line some uniformity and some sense I changed the location San Diego and San Francisco to New York, since that was were 'Century City' is based in 'Conquest'.

Kolp's scavengers find the 'Alpha-Omega' bomb on a wrecked Army Train in the remains of Penn Station. Seeing something that could be useful the weapon is scavenged. Kolp and his people are amazed to find that the weapon is still functional.

Inspector Kolp assumes Breck's former title of Governor. (Battle)

Mendez is named Chief Lieutenant, serving as Kolp's trusted advisor and second-in-command. (Battle)

Mendez's title is provided in Marvel's comic adaptation of 'Battle'.

--

A conflict between the inhabitants of Ape City and the mutant citizens of New York takes place, the details of which are unrecorded. Following this conflict, peace reigns for the next 12 years. During this time, the mutants wonder if anyone else survived the war. (Battle)

In the film's novelization of "Battle" it incorrectly quotes this figure at 9 years, rather than 12, and the original location was San Diego not New York, at this stage it is unclear if Kolp and or Caesar were part of this conflict.

2007

---

Alma becomes Kolp's communications officer.

Alma's title is established in the novelization and Marvel's comic adaptation of "Battle".

Over the next 11 years and 3 months, Kolp and Alma develop a good working relationship and, in time, a friendship. Alma develops romantic feelings for him, but he never seems to notice.

This information is provided in the film's novelization of "Battle".

2008

---

May 17 Caesar's son is born by his wife, Lisa, and is named Cornelius.

Bobby Porter who portrayed Cornelius in "Battle" was born in 1940. So logically I decided to make his character younger to fit this timeline considering the information below.

In the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes", it is stated that Cornelius is born in 1995.

The San Simian Sentinel, a promotional newspaper distributed to moviegoers during the theatrical release of "Battle for the Planet of the Apes", establishes Cornelius as being 10 years old in the film.

2018

---

September 01 Caesar rules a community (Ape City) of apes and humans that try to live together harmoniously.

MacDonald tells Caesar that in the Archives Section of the dead city (Forbidden City-Century City) near the 'Command Post' there are tapes of his mother (Zira) and father (Cornelius), thereby unlocking the secrets of the future.

That evening, Caesar, MacDonald and Virgil get armaments for their journey from Mandemus the keeper of the Armory.

"This armory has been my home for twenty-seven years." Mandemus tells.

The date is arrived at based on "Conquest" 1991 movie timeline plus the 27 years Mandemus mentions being the keeper of Caesar's Armory and the fact that MacDonald gave Caesar a report on their Winter supplies so far, so it is assumed that it might be Autumn. As the community stock up and prepare for the coming months ahead.

September 04 Three days later, Caesar, Virgil and MacDonald arrive at the dead city.

"...it's a three day journey..." Virgil informs.

Caesar, Virgil and MacDonald set off a security warning system that alerts Governor Kolp who recognizes Caesar and sends his men to kill them.

Caesar, Virgil and MacDonald get into and out of the Archives Section, discovering that in the future apes will destroy the Earth.

While trying to avoid being shot by Governor Kolp's men getting out of the city, they also discover that mutants live within it.

Governor Kolp rules the mutants, with Mendez as an advisor.

Governor Kolp decides to attack Ape City, and orders a scouting party to follow Caesar, Virgil and MacDonald back to find it.

September 07 Three days later, Caesar, Virgil and MacDonald arrive back at Ape City.

Caesar informs his people at the council meeting that they should be ready for an expected assault from the mutants.

Kolp's scouts find Caesar's Ape City and return to tell him the good news.

That night, General Aldo instigates his gorilla troops to take over Ape City and Caesar.

Cornelius, Caesar's son, overhears this and is fatally wounded by Aldo.

September 08 Next morning MacDonald suspects that Cornelius' injuries were not an accident and informs Virgil of his suspicions.

September 10 Kolp's scouts return to the dead city and report back to the Governor Kolp of Caesar's Ape City whereabouts.

Governor Kolp organizes and deploys his army convoy to attack Ape City.

September 13 In the morning Cornelius dies from his injuries.

Aldo declares martial law and orders all humans rounded up and put into the corral.

Governor Kolp and his troops attack Ape City and are defeated.

While escaping, Governor Kolp is killed by Aldo and his gorillas.

Caesar discovers the truth that Aldo murdered his son Cornelius, and confronts him and Aldo is killed.

The humans living in the Ape City win a slightly ideological victory and temporary equal status with the apes.

In the spirit of equality between humans and apes, Caesar renames Ape City "Our City."

This information is provided in the film's novelization of "Battle".

Mendez becomes the next leader of the mutants and is thereafter known as Mendez the First. Thus begins the Mendez Dynasty, which, over the next 2,000 years, will spawn 26 generations of the House of Mendez.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

Special Note: Alma was instructed by Governor Kolp to launch the 'Alpha-Omega' bomb at Ape City if he failed to return; Mendez convinces her not to, and begins what will become the Mendez Dynasty, with the 'Alpha-Omega' bomb which will become the basis of their religion.

2018 - 2068

---

The first Ape City prospers with Caesar a benevolent ruler, but humanity's place in society continues to erode. The Forbidden Zones become a real danger as animal and plant mutations grow out of hand.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes". Please note the original date was 2001-2040, but I changed it to fit around Caesar's death and the year 2018 (Battle) for this time line.

In the city of New York, the first Mendez dies, his son by Alma, Mendez II taking over.

The 'Alpha-Omega' bomb has become a virtual item of worship to the radiation scarred survivors and their new generation. The city begins to be buried by shifting sands, hiding the outskirts of it from casual view.

On the West Coast, where less radiation is present, Apes and humans have an uneasy civilization where humans are a distinct second class. Most towns that have sprung up are separated by species, the humans living apart from the Apes.

2063

---

August Lisa dies, at age 90.

In the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes", it is stated that Lisa dies in the year 2038. I have adjusted the date to fit around Caesar's death.

2068 - 2080

---

Conditions between apes and humans worsen. While educational programs maintain that there is no difference, humans labour under an aura of inferiority. Voluntarily, they withdraw from active participation in the council and form their own community-within-the-community, separated from the apes by a river. The level of culture in Ape City degenerates.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes". Please note the original date was 2040-2052, but I changed it to fit around Caesar's year of when he died.

2068

---

May Caesar dies, at age 94. Not survived by children, his rule is turned over to a council of apes and humans under the leadership of a particularly well-respected orang-utan. He and the office are christened "Lawgiver."

In the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes", it is stated that Caesar dies in the year 2040.

But in the Prologue of 'Battle for the Planet of the Apes' dated 2670 the Lawgiver states, "...and now some six hundred years after Caesar's death..." The oldest known chimpanzee to live (Tarzan's Cheeta) died at the age of 74, so I added another 20 years to reflect the new species of 'humanoid apes' development after the Plague.

--

With no surviving offspring from Caesar and Lisa, Ape City's leadership is turned over to a ruling council of apes and humans, led by a well-respected orang-utan named the Lawgiver in Caesar's honour.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

2080 - 2098

---

In Caesar's Ape City, the one that Taylor will encounter, humans have lost the small equality they received from the time of Caesar's rule.

--

Succeeding generations of humans have begun to de-evolve and those who can't speak are little more than beasts, holding onto the barest level of intelligence. Untrainable and wild, they are driven from the city as unproductive creatures.

Please note the original date was 2052-2070, but I changed it to fit around Caesar's year of when he died.

2099 - 2249

---

Ape and human cultures both expand into the Forbidden Zones, taming them as population needs demand. However, these cultures tend to isolate and grow bitter toward one another. Humans, still devolving due to the radiation, grow ever more barbaric. A sudden, fierce strain develops out of the docility, heading the human and gorilla armies toward another inevitable conflict.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes". Please note the original date was 2070-2220, but I changed it to fit around Caesar's year of when he died.

--

As the Simian culture gradually increases, they develop their own religion, architecture, culture, social structure, medical and agriculture; including maintaining the human weapons and implements left over from the War which the apes adapt for their own use.

--

In this period, Mendez's mutants continue to establish themselves in New York. The mixture of their bloodline with that of other bands of local mutants begins to produce rudimentary telepathic and psychokinetic powers. Mendez's descendants continue to rule the New York mutant population for the next 26 generations.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

They have a level of technology that the apes do not. Their entire lives are built around worship of their god, the 'Alpha Omega' bomb whose cobalt casing has now been beautified with gold leaf. Only the ruling council knows of the pre-bomb history.

--

This era serves as a balancing point in history, where human/mutant devolvement most clearly coincides with ape/simian evolutionary culture. It is also the last gasp of human aggressiveness.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

2249 - 2779

---

Over the next five centuries, humans primarily become a slave culture tolerated but completely unrespected by the apes. Gorillas dominate the apes by now, and it is an age of exploration. Populations push out in all directions. Land is tamed and cultivated with slave help, new outposts are set up and contact is made with other surviving bands. A few minor wars break out, caused by gorilla aggressiveness, but on the whole, peace reigns as energies are channelled into retaking the world. The cultural heritage of Caesar's Ape City gains widespread usage, and regional governments are often designed after the Lawgiver/Council mould. Still, some bands of renegade humans persist, continually harassing the ape outposts.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes". The original time line date was 2220-2750, but I changed it to fit around Caesar's year of when he died.

On the West Coast Humans have lost any status in Ape Culture and become, primarily, a slave culture tolerated but completely lacking any respect by the apes.

2503

---

New York exists as a futuristic metropolis.

This is apocryphal. The movie series establishes that the atomic war occurred in 2006. Please refer to contradictions below.

It is also possible that the picture/photograph which Virдон and Burke saw in Farrow's book was a futuristic version/vision, a projection of what New York may look like in the future at the time of the book's publication, which of course was before the war, due to Mankind's current prosperity.

2670

---

In at least one part of the United States, man and ape have succeeded in living side by side in a peaceful agrarian state for some time. A common religion has arisen among them, teaching that God created beast and man so both might live together in friendship and share dominion over a world of peace.

The exploits of Zira, Cornelius and Caesar are still recounted with reverence by the Lawgiver of the day, in the hope that both species can learn from the bloody mistakes of the past. Sadly, this time of peace does not last forever. (Battle)

2673

---

March 23 Colonel George Taylor transmits his final report to Cape Kennedy from the Astræa before he goes into hibernation. (Planet)

2778

---

One particularly daring human raid into a fairly large ape population causes an outraged public cry from the apes. In response, the systematic destruction of the human outlaw bands is instituted. The Lawgiver of the day (whether a regional-level Lawgiver or higher is unknown) writes the Sacred Scrolls and their unflattering portrait of humanity.

In the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes". The original time line date was 2750.

The Sacred Scrolls are carried to other parts of the United States by ape traders.

"When were those Sacred Scrolls of yours written?" Taylor asks.

"Twelve hundred years ago." Zaius answers.

The year is taken from (Planet) 3978 minus 1200 years for this timeline date.

With these writings, the newly revised version of recorded ape history begins. The Scrolls preach that man is a creature to be feared, not tamed. All knowledge of the apes' enslavement and subjugation is "forgotten" for the sake of apekind's future, and ape history is rewritten to begin at this point in time. Only the orang-utan elders of the ruling council know the truth about history, and they guard that truth tightly. The Scrolls include passages offering wisdom, religion and laws. To speak against the Scrolls is to commit heresy, a charge carrying up to two years' imprisonment.

From the Thirteenth Scroll: "And Proteus brought the upright beast into the garden and chained him to a tree, and the children made sport of him." And from the Twenty-third Scroll, ninth verse: "Beware the beast 'man,' for he is the Devil's pawn. Alone among God's primates, he kills for sport or lust or greed. Yea, he will murder his brother to possess his brother's land. Let him not breed in great numbers, for he will make a desert of his home and yours. Shun him; drive him back into his jungle lair, for he is the harbinger of death." (Planet)

2779 - 3085

---

Due to one particularly daring raid, a large group of wild (barbaric) humans being a menace to ape agriculture causes an outraged public cry from the apes. Systematic destruction of these wild (barbaric) humans is instituted.

The spread of the Sacred Scrolls proves a reactionary force, their influence reinstating the early days of isolation. As growth slows, the orang-utan elders take more and more power away from the gorillas until they rule completely. The loss of communication between population centres is slow at first, but speeds up when the Forbidden Zones become unliveable again due to poor conservation techniques. The radiation-blasted soil dies, deserts bloom and humankind grows completely docile. Cultural patterns in the isolated areas retain shards and snippets of others. Thus, one area might have a Lawgiver officer while another might operate differently. A second Ape City, located near New York City's Forbidden Zone, grows isolated after its incorporation into the pan-American ape society. This city develops independently from San Diego's Ape City, lacking an historical record that accurately chronicles west coast developments.

In the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes", the original time line date was 2750-3085. Again I have adjusted the date to fit around Caesar's year of when he died for this time line.

The Caesar's Ape City near New York City becomes isolated since orang-utan leaders want to keep their area pure of outside thought. These rulers are one of the few who still harbour the secret that man once ruled the planet.

The San Diego's Ape City reference could pertain to Central City, from the live-action TV-Series, which would make sense since the series is based on the western side of America.

In the former western United States, a number of human settlements form, separated by wide distances, each governed by an ape prefect with a garrison of soldiers to keep the peace.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "The Gladiators".

These settlements are overseen by the Supreme High Council, located in Central City.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "Escape From Tomorrow".

2785

---

The early part of the Ornan Period, a fever which struck only the human population killed several hundred people in a section of the rural zone. The entire sector became barren for years afterward.

This was described in "The Cure." It is impossible to accurately pinpoint the exact date of "The Ornan Period." The implication is that it occurred hundreds of years in the past and was not common knowledge to the ape population at large. So I think it would be safe to say that this incident happened about 300 years ago.

2985

---

Apes raided the village of Borak for Human slaves. Many beings were killed on both sides. Finally a meeting arranged and an agreement was reached. The Humans would provide five slaves twice a month during the Autumn* months for work in the mines.

Brun describes this sad history in "The Liberator." He states that this happened "a long, long time ago". His ceremony is described as being done in the fashion of "Our fathers and our father's father." It can be postulated that this happened a century previously before the living-memory of anyone in the village. It can be presumed that it occurred within three or four generations.

**Originally it was Summer, but I changed it to Autumn to fit this timeline.*

3016

---

October 05 Barlow is born.

This is based on John Hoyt's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Hoyt was actually born in 1905.

Barlow is included because he encountered the fugitives twice and is an established character in the mythos.

3025

---

January 30 Brun is born.

This is based on John Ireland's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Ireland was actually born in 1914.

3032

---

October 01 Polar is born.

This is based on Lonny Chapman's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Chapman was actually born in 1921.

3033

---

August 16 Farrow is born.

This is based on Royal Dano's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Dano was actually born in 1922.

3034

---

March 08 Zaius is born.

This is based on Booth Coleman's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Coleman was actually born in 1923.

December 05 Yalu is born.

This is based on Normann Burton's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Burton was actually born in 1923.

3035

---

June 13 Aboro is born.

This is based on Percy Rodrigues' age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Rodrigues was actually born in 1924.

October 15 Urko is born.

This is based on Mark Lenard's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Lenard was actually born in 1924.

3036

---

May 02 Hurton is born.

This is based on Roscoe Lee Brown's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Brown was actually born in 1925.

September 11 Ann is born.

Anne Seymour was born in 1909, thus she was 65 in 1974. As you can see she is older than Normann Burton. So I made her character Ann younger by 2 years than Yalu to fit around in this timeline of "The Interrogation".

October 16 Janor is born.

This is based on Michael Conrad's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Conrad was actually born in 1925.

3039

---

January 13 Zoran is born.

This is based on David Sheiner's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Sheiner was actually born in 1928.

3041

---

March 24 Tolar is born.

This is based on William Smith's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085, minus 4 years; Smith was actually born in 1934.

The date is to compensate around the introduction to the Games at Kaymak and the birth of Tolar's son Dalton.

3054

---

January 17 Anto is born.

This is based on Geoffry Deuel's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Deuel was actually born in 1943.

3056

---

February 17 Arn is born.

This is based on Zina Bethune's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Bethune was actually born in 1945.

3058

---

May 28 Amy is born.

This is based on Sondra Locke's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Locke was actually born in 1947.

3060

---

January 29 Dalton is born.

His father, Tolar, is a gladiator, while his mother is a pacifist. His mother dies young, causing his father to have to bring him up alone. Dalton shares his mother's pacifistic beliefs, but Tolar is unable to accept that and stubbornly trains him as a gladiator anyway.

This is based on Marc Singer's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085, plus 1 year; Singer was actually born in 1948.

The date is to compensate around the introduction to the Games at Kaymak.

April 06 Fauna is born.

This is based on Jane Actman's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Actman was actually born in 1949.

---

Barlow becomes Prefect for the Human settlement of Kaymak. He introduces gladiatorial combat to channel the aggressive impulses of Humans. Soon after Tolar falls in love and sires a son.

Barlow states in "The Gladiators" that he has been Prefect for 25 years. Tolar states that Dalton's mother was interested in him because of the games.

3061

---

September 17 Galen is born in Central City to Ann and Yalu.

This is an inference. Roddy McDowell was 46 in 1974; his actual date of birth is 1928. This would hardly qualify him as "a young Chimp." I estimate that Galen is 24 by 3085. This is an age when people are establishing themselves in society. The names of Galen's parents come from "The Interrogation."

November 15 Carsia is born.

Joanna Barnes was born in 1934, thus she was 40 in 1974. This I believe is too old for her character, so I made her the same age as Roddy McDowell's character Galen to fit in this timeline of "Up above the world so high".

---

Galen's parents, Yalu and Ann, are a respected chimpanzee couple living in Central City.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "The Interrogation".

---

Augustus, Galen's third cousin on Ann's side, is born in the same year as Galen. The two chimps grow up together as close friends.

Galen's specific relation to Augustus is revealed in the novelization of "The Tyrant" in the Planet of the Apes #4: Lord of the Apes. The televised episode merely says they are cousins.

---

Behind Galen's childhood home in Central City is a small brook. The sound of the running water is a source of comfort to the young chimpanzee.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "The Liberator".

--

Urko attends the Central City military academy, where he befriends two fellow gorillas, Aboro and Bulta.

3065

---

At the military academy Urko, Aboro and Bulta show promise as leaders, but when Aboro is caught cheating in the final days of his senior year, his reputation is irreparably damaged. Over the next two decades, the three remain friends, but while Urko becomes a general and Chief of Central City Security, with Bulta as his assistant, Aboro never rises higher than district chief of the village of Hathor, as the blot on his record prevents his promotion. Aboro pretends to accept his fate but secretly covets Urko's success.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "The Tyrant".

Aboro remarks that the incident occurred twenty years ago in "The Tyrant". The fact that he was not drummed out of the service implies that he was near the end of his studies.

--

Urko and Bulta graduate from the academy.

3070

---

Nine year old Galen and his cousin, Augustus, steal apples from a neighbor's tree.

Galen reminisces about this with Augustus in "The Tyrant".

--

Zaius joins the High Council.

This occurs prior to the beginning of the series.

--

General Urko is appointed Chief of Security.

This occurs prior to the beginning of the series.

3072

---

July 14 Kraik is born.

This is based on Jackie Earle Haley's age in 1974, subtracted from 3085; Haley was actually born in 1961.

3073

---

The Pegasus crash-lands on Earth. Astronauts Lieutenant John Van Lowen and Lieutenant Terry Maxwell survive but Colonel Edward Jackson dies from severe injuries. Zaius, a member of the Ape High Council, wants to question the two astronauts, but General Urko, The Chief of security, has them killed.

Zaius says that Human astronauts from the past crashed "more than ten years ago". Twelve years sounds like a fair estimate for this length of time.

3060's - 3070's

---

General Urko marries a female ape named Elta.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "The Trap".

The marriage is only a speculation for this time period.

As a young chimp, Galen sometimes hides in a secret gully to play hooky from school.

This is revealed in the novelization of "The Surgeon", in Planet of the Apes #2: Escape to Tomorrow, and in an earlier draft of the script.

As Galen and his cousin Augustus grow up, Augustus often chides him for being too impulsive, predicting it will some day get Galen into trouble. On at least one occasion, however—when Galen allows himself to be captured by a human farmer so his cousin could get away secretly—that impulsivity proves to be an asset.

This information comes from the novelization of "The Tyrant" in Planet of the Apes #4: Lord of the Apes.

Before her marriage to Polar, Zantes, trained to be a nurse.

Polar and Zantes, chimpanzee farmers, have three children. The oldest son is named Anto, while the youngest son is Remus. Between them in age is a daughter, Jillia.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "The Good Seeds".

The children's ages are not revealed, but the first-draft script of the episode reveals that Jillia is between her brothers in age.

Galen and Kira become engaged. For undisclosed reasons, they do not get married.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "The Surgeon".

Galen and Kira infer that they broke off the engagement in recent years.

Galen enjoys time spent with his cousin and friend, Augustus, now a member of the Council of Central City. It is the last time the two will see each other for the next three or four years.

As Augustus, will later be is assigned as Prefect of Hathor. A decent and honest ape, Augustus prides himself on the fairness and justice of his administration. Unfortunately, one of his district chiefs, Aboro, has become corrupt, damaging the legitimacy of Augustus' reign.

This information appears in the script "The Tyrant".

Drs. Kira and Leander, surgeons at a medical center on the outskirts of Central City, attempt blood transfusion between humans. The test patient is a human boy of 16, badly injured during a hunting accident. His father, Travin, allows him to be experimented on since he'll die without the procedure. Travin's daughter Arna is chosen as a donor. Unaware of blood types, however, the doctors inadvertently kill the boy since his sister is the wrong type. Thus, Leander concludes that blood transfusion is against the laws of nature, and the girl is branded as evil, her name and status stripped. Thereafter, no one speaks to her except through Travin, and the other 11 humans at the compound routinely beat her for any mistakes she makes.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "The Surgeon".

Kira notes that she attempted a blood transfusion a few years ago.

July Farrow from the settlement of Chalo, discovers an old bomb shelter "about two years ago". He tells Burke and Virdon this in June of 3085 and makes it his "secret cave". Inside are a number of ancient artefacts, including books from many centuries earlier. Unable to read them, he uses most of them to start fires. One he keeps, however, as he enjoys looking at the pictures.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "Escape From Tomorrow".

A human male is killed by Urko's soldiers. His wife, Katrin, is devastated as a result and joins the United Freedom Force (UFF), an illegal organization promoting human and simian equality, so she can help end ape brutality and bring about a genuine peace.

The script, the "Hostage", was written early for the series, but was never filmed. Burke is called Stan Kovak, Urko is named Ursus and Central City is known as Simian City.

A chimpanzee farmer named Telemon finds an ancient radio transmitter buried on his farm in northern Arizona. Thinking it a holy relic, he cleans it up and brings it into his house, where he and his family begin worshipping it as a "god-thing." Recognizing it to be the creation of an intelligence far in advance of their culture's, and fearful that his village's religious leader, Syrinx, will deem it evil and make them give it up, Telemon keeps the device a secret from others outside the family.

The script, "A Fallen God", was written early for the series, but was never filmed. Dardon is said to be a young teenager in the show, which is set in 3085.

June 14      Escape From Tomorrow. The Hyperion reenters and crash-lands on Earth outside the Human settlement of Chailo, in the region of the United States that was once south-western California. Astronauts Colonel Alan Virдон and Major Peter Burke survive, but Major Stephen Jones dies in the crash. At this time the ape government, which rules over most of the area, is an orang-utan faction headed by Councillor Zaius. General Urko, a gorilla, works cooperatively with him; with continual "reminding" that Zaius is in charge. Urko chafes at the situation. To Zaius and Urko, the constant threat of the renegade astronauts starting a human rebellion.

The date above is from the opening credits of the TV Series, but Hyperion's chronometer when it crash-landed back to Earth states it is 21st of March 3085.

The humans within the TV Series haven't de-evolved as quickly as those on the East Coast, where more bombs fell; this could partly be explained by the air plants in the Rocky Mountains. (No one knows how long the air plants ran after the war ended) Which left the apes with the task of apprehending and executing them. (Live Action TV Series)

June 16      Burke and Virдон are captured by Urko and Galen.

June 17      Burke and Virдон are set up to be "shot while trying to escape". Galen accidentally kills Urko's Lieutenant in a struggle.

June 24      Virдон, Burke and Galen begin their adventures together.

The astronauts gain the chimpanzee Galen as a friend and traveling companion. Between them they leave a few traces of twentieth century human culture, like certain agricultural and farming techniques, that don't do much good for the humans but eventually serve to advance ape civilization. (Live Action TV Series)

Virдон remarks that it has been a week since they escaped.

July          The Gladiators. Burke estimates they are North of San Francisco. A Human kills Urko's Lieutenant, Jason. Urko holds Barlow responsible for Jason's death and transfers him to the remote outpost of Venton.

The Trap. Burke, Virдон and Galen are near the village of Numai. This is near ancient ruins of San Francisco.

The Good Seeds. Burke, Virдон and Galen go to Polar's farm. The farm is "four day's hard ride from Central City. The travelers spend two weeks here so that Galen's leg can mend.

August      The Legacy. Burke, Virдон and Galen enter the ruins of Ancient Oakland.

Tomorrow's Tide. Burke, Virдон and Galen approach the Pacific Ocean. Burke speculates that it could be Malibu, Pismo Beach or Paradise Cove.

The Surgeon. Virдон is shot by a Gorilla patrol. Galen and Burke take him to a medical center outside Central City.

The Deception. The trio befriend a blind female chimp named Fauna whose father has been killed, supposedly by humans. Fauna develops a crush on Burke while the trio deal with vigilante apes known as 'Dragoons'.

September    The Horse Race. Burke, Virdon and Galen enter the village of Venton. After winning the wager with Urko, Barlow, along with Martin and Gregor, return to Kaymak.

The Interrogation. Burke is captured and taken to Central City. Urko goes on an inspection tour of the outer provinces.

The Tyrant. Virdon, Burke and Galen enter the village of Hathor.

The Cure. Virdon, Burke and Galen enter the village of Trion. Virdon meets Amy. One week later the group leaves the village.

Yalu, Galen's father is recently elected to the High Council.

Galen learns of this happening recently in "The Interrogation".

--

Wanda discovers an ancient book on brainwashing techniques in a time capsule from the late 20th century.

Wanda states the book was recently discovered in "The Interrogation".

October        The Liberator. It is Autumn. Virdon, Burke and Galen approach the village of Borak.

Originally it is suppose to be Summer, but I changed it to Autumn, to fit this timeline. But if the 21st of March 3085 date is used from the Hyperion's chronometer when it crash-landed back to Earth, then the Summer reference would be correct, as the story would have happened in July.

Up above the world so high. Virdon, Burke and Galen are near the sea and come across Leuric, a human from Chatka, trying to fly his glider; which he has been working on and designing for months, hoping to successfully be the first human to fly.

The Hostage.* The United Freedom Force, a radical group of humans and apes, kidnap a daughter of a prominent Ape family. Virdon offers to negotiate for the daughter's release.

A Fallen God.* Virdon, Burke and Galen come to a town. To avoid suspicion from the local preacher, Syrinx; Alan and Peter go to work on a farm owned by Telemon, a local farmer. Once there Virdon spies Telemon's family praying to their altar which contains a radio transmitter.

\ These stories come from scripts that were developed for the Live Action TV Series, which can be found on Hunter Goatley's website.*

November      The Trek.** An ethnic minority tribe has been on the run and hiding for years. It has been guilty of resisting the Apes and was ordered exterminated. Virdon, Burke and Galen become involved with this tribe; which has two choices: fight the Apes and go down fighting or seek a better life beyond the Forbidden Zone.

Freedom Road.** Odin, a human saves one of the astronauts and thus could be identified to the local Gorilla Prefect for helping the fugitives. The Perfect offers amnesty for information about the fugitives, so Galen visits him to see if it is legitimate. But he tells Galen that various humans have been disappearing; so after the Prefect himself goes missing, Virdon, Burke and Galen investigate.

The Mine.** Our trio comes upon advanced technology in the form of a water-driven mill. The architect is an old man who once visited a super-civilization; this information could lead the astronauts a way home, but the old man is being forced to work in a salt mine. The astronauts are captured while trying to rescue the old man, so Galen in the guise of a government inspector attempts to free them.

The Trial.** In a highly productive village, a nasty Gorilla hazes a human in the fields. Virдон attempts to help the human, but gets into a struggle with the Gorilla, who is accidentally shot. Burke and Galen raise doubts about Alan's guilt, which are supported by the villagers threatening to stop work if Virдон is unfairly punished. So the Commanding Gorilla agrees to a trial. Can Burke and Galen find the real killer?

An orang-utans named Doswa serves as leader of the Central City High Council. He will later be remembered as one of Zaius' most admired predecessors in the role.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "The Surgeon".

A human armed with superior technology sneaks into Central City and is captured. Believing such knowledge represents a danger to the status quo, Zaius summarily orders the man's execution without even learning his name. Zaius finds several grenades among the man's belongings and stores them in his office for safekeeping, and as a reminder of man's violence.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "Escape From Tomorrow".

It is possible that it could have been one of the astronauts that survived the crash in 3073.

While active with the Free Speech Movement, Galen teaches an ethics class. Lora, daughter of Senator Sallus, attends the course as a freshman, along with two apes named Aro and Manus. Lora forms a relationship with the two apes, eventually joining the United Freedom Force (UFF)—an illegal organization promoting human and simian equality—with them.

The script, the "Hostage", was written early for the series, but was never filmed. Burke is called Stan Kovak, Urko is named Ursus and Central City is known as Simian City.

The council passes the Human Control Laws, a series of anti-human regulations imposing a strict curfew and prohibiting humans from leaving villages without a pass. This makes many humans even more placid than before. In response, the United Freedom Force (UFF), an illegal organization promoting human and simian equality, increases its activity. Though denounced as a terrorist group, the UFF—consisting of apes and humans unhappy with societal inequities between the species—usually sticks to non-violent protests. As such, the government tends to take a light hand when dealing with them. For the next eight months, Urko searches for the UFF headquarters, but to no avail.

The script, the "Hostage", was written early for the series, but was never filmed. Burke is called Stan Kovak, Urko is named Ursus and Central City is known as Simian City.

Arn, a human woman, falls in love with Tomar, who works on a farm with his brother Durlin. A rebel and a man of hope, he dislikes how mankind is treated and spends his time trying to convince others to see the light. Arrested by the apes, he is executed for daring to give mankind hope. The apes let her live, but Urko considers this a mistake, believing the family of a rebel should always be killed to prevent the spread of poisonous ideas. After an unpleasant time in a stockade, she is set free. Unable to face the loneliness of farming without Tomar, she sets out on her own and ends up a homeless scavenger living in the ruins of Oakland, California.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "The Legacy".

Arn's stockade time is established in the script of "The Legacy".

Fauna, a chimpanzee, enjoys a romantic relationship with a fellow chimp, spending time in a secret grotto with him whenever they can. When she loses her eyesight, however, he leaves her alone and heartbroken.

Lucian, a book-collecting chimp living in a simple home along the shore, shares his books with his daughter Fauna. After she loses her sight, he reads them to her every night by the fire.

Lucian tired of seeing humans mistreated, forms a clandestine group sympathetic to the plight of humanity. Befriending several humans, he secretly shares ape knowledge with them. This angers other apes, including his brother Sestus, a member of an anti-human hate group called the Dragoons.

From the Planet of the Apes episode of "The Deception".

Daku, aide-de-camp to District Chief Aboro of Hathor, hires Amhar, a human from the village of Loban, to murder an enemy. The crime is successful, and Daku employs Amhar's services several more times.

The fall of Mankind is complete.

--

Deterioration caused by exposure to radiation, combined with the general demoralization of being subservient to apes, wipes the minds of most humans. Humanity is eventually expelled from many ape cities as unproductive, useless animals, forced to live wild in the forests.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

Even on the West Coast, humans have degraded to the status of dumb beasts. Gorillas, having no other enemies, hunt them and they are used in scientific and medical experiments.

April 10 Astronauts Colonel William Richards, Major Kyle Smith, Major Lauren Harden and Dr. Natalie Merryll, in the Nemesis re-enters the Solar System on its way back to Earth.

Virdon spots a satellite orbiting the Earth during the night and decides to go to Cape Kennedy to see if it was launched from there.

April 13 The Nemesis orbits the Earth.

Virdon, Burke, Galen and Lucian journey through the Eastern Forbidden Zone to head for Cape Kennedy.

April 14 The Nemesis lands at Cape Kennedy.

April 28 The Nemesis crew reactivate the hidden Facility at Cape Kennedy.

June 05 The Nemesis crew go to New York to reconfigure the 'Alpha-Omega' bomb, which is done successfully, located at St Patrick's Cathedral.

June 24 Virdon, Burke, Galen and Lucian reach Cape Kennedy, and meet the Nemesis crew.

June 26 Urko is killed in an ambush set up by the Nemesis crew and the fugitives after following them to Cape Kennedy, but before he dies he kills Smith.

September 01 Along with Harden, Virdon, Burke and Galen on the Nemesis return home after 30 years on the planet of the apes.

3479 - 3979

Continually encroaching Forbidden Zones bring on a new Dark Age. Progress slows to a halt in New York's Ape City, where all knowledge that humans once had a major civilization is lost. It becomes legend, then nothing at all as the conservative orangutans conceal such knowledge. Progressive chimpanzee elements are stifled. Late in this period, apes begin using humans as experimental animals and entertaining hunting diversions for the gorillas. A certain instinctive survival pattern remains in the humans, but it is less than successful.

3500's - 3800's

---

The Simian Industrial Revolution.

The Simian Culture has progressed at a steady rate since the fall from grace of Mankind. In this period of 'ape evolution' there has been a rediscovery of past technology—human technology, for ape use.

This goes against past doctrines by the Council of Elders of old to dissolve any knowledge that Man was once the dominate species of the earth before the Holocaust; and the banning of their technology for simian use.

Later the newly formed Supreme Council of Elders of the Simian World decided to use Man's technology for simian purposes to advance its culture and to control the human population that has been a menace to ape civilization; to this end there has been a resurgence of discoveries to put Man's forgotten technology to good use and to pass it on as ape technology.

In this brief period the old laws pertaining to Man's past were put aside—to a point—to advance simian interest.

But as time went on, this did not last long, as Man's technology was deemed too destructive and the Elders of the day prohibited and destroyed what they had of Man's past to reinvent—cleanse—their culture to bring it back to a more innocent age for better control to develop ape culture to their way of thinking.

By putting this period in the timeline, I hope to explain the technology used by the apes during the 'Return to the Planet of the Apes' TV-Series; and the lack of it in 'Planet' and 'Beneath'.

This would also explain the apes rediscovering photography, possibly one of the last remnants of Man's technology still in use in the movie 'Planet'; and in the episode of "The Legacy" Zaius is amazed to see a photo of Virdon's family and wonders how humans created such images.

3651

---

August 06 Flames of Doom. The NASA spacecraft Venturer enters a time warp and crashes in a lagoon on an unknown planet. Shocked to learn that they are now in the year 3651 A.D., the three crewmembers, Bill Hudson, Jeff Carter and Judy Franklin, manage to escape the ship before it sinks. Exploring their surroundings, they encounter electrical storms, high-velocity winds, tremors, and walls of flame – then the ground opens and swallows Judy. Bill and Jeff are forced to continue on without their friend, and soon meet a group of primitive humans, including a girl named Nova, who wears the United States I.D. dog tags of Ronald Brent - an astronaut born in the year 2079, over a century after Bill, Jeff and Judy set off on their mission; they are further astonished to learn that the planet they are on is in fact the Earth – a world now ruled by apes...

The date above was taken from the Venturer's chronometer before it crashed-landed.

Escape from Ape City. General Urko's gorilla army have attacked the caves in which the astronauts are hiding, and Bill was amongst those captured. General Urko wishes to use the humans in his army's war games, but Bill is singled out by chimpanzee scientists Zira and Cornelius, and their superior, Doctor Zaius, and taken away for study. When Bill is nicknamed 'Blue Eyes' by Zira, and when he easily solves their puzzles and tests, Doctor Zaius realises the threat that such an intelligent human will pose to ape society; he leaves for a meeting with the Ape Council, planning to request that all humans be exterminated. Can Bill persuade Zira and Cornelius to help him, or are he and his friends doomed..?

Lagoon of Peril. Doctor Zaius and General Urko lead an expedition into the Forbidden Zone to verify reports of a spaceship crashing in the lagoon. When Zira and Cornelius warn Bill and Jeff of the expedition, the two astronauts ask Nova to lead them back to the submerged ship so that they can salvage its on-board laser and blow up the vessel before the apes can reach it...

Tunnel of Fear. Bill and Jeff decide to ask Zira and Cornelius for help in finding a safer place for the humans to hide. Using the monster-infested tunnels beneath Ape City, the two astronauts manage to reach Zira and Cornelius' laboratory, and explain their plight to the scientists. Cornelius suggests a valley which lies to the south of his latest archaeological digging site – but the route there will be fraught with danger...

The Unearthly Prophecy. Pursued through the desert by General Urko and his gorilla army, Bill and Jeff take refuge in a hole and find themselves inside the ruins of the New York Public Library. As they make their way through the rubble-strewn underground city, they come across a huge cavern above a giant power complex, which is operated by mysterious cloaked and hooded figures. They then see their lost comrade, Judy, also wearing a robe, and seemingly in a trance. Bill and Jeff are captured and learn from their leader, Krador, that they are the Underdwellers, descendants of the humans who sought safety underground during the holocaust many centuries ago. Krador goes on to tell the two astronauts that their prophecy foretells that Judy will help them return to the surface world, and reclaim it from the apes...

River of Flames. Judy asks Bill and Jeff to help Krador and the Underdwellers, who are under threat from a lava flow that will soon engulf their reactor room. The two astronauts are initially wary, but agree to use the laser from their ship to cut a new path for the lava, providing that Judy be allowed to leave with them. Meanwhile, gorilla troops discover where the laser has been hidden, and they take it back to Ape City for General Urko to examine. As the lava approaches the reactor room, the three astronauts must find a way to retrieve the laser – or else the Underdwellers will be completely wiped out...

Screaming Wings. Making their way to the human settlement, Bill, Jeff and Judy see some humans many feet below, but when they investigate, they discover that the figures are merely dummies. A World War II airplane then swoops down, and its gorilla pilot drops a net onto the mannequins – it seems that Urko's army is testing the plane in preparation for war games. Realising the threat posed by apes capable of flight, the three astronauts resolve to steal them plane. With Zira and Cornelius' help, they formulate a plan – only to discover that the apes are building an entire fleet of such aircraft...

Trail to the Unknown. Doctor Zaius thanks Cornelius and Zira for stealing Urko's plane, which he believes has saved ape society from the threat of the General's dictatorship. Meanwhile, Bill, Jeff and Judy work on the construction of rafts to help the humans reach 'New Valley' via the river. Using a map given to them by Cornelius, they make their way through a hot, steaming jungle, emerging into a desolate desert landscape, where they find the wreck of a United States spaceship, and its pilot, astronaut Ron Brent.

He tells them how he left Earth on August 6, 2109 from a launch pad in the Mojave Desert, only to enter a time warp and crash on this world; after meeting a young Nova and her tribe, he decided to join them on their travels, but when he became separated from them, he returned to his ship and has stayed there in hiding for twenty years. Brent offers to show them the way to New Valley – unaware that Urko and his gorilla troops are not far behind them, determined to capture the humans at any cost...

Attack from the Clouds. Ape City is attacked a huge flying object, which Urko believes is the aircraft stolen by Blue Eyes and the other humans. He gives orders for his troops to track them down and retrieve the plane. However, in New Valley, as Bill and Judy prepare to fly the aircraft, they witness a giant flying monster attack a flock of sheep and then take refuge in a cave. As Urko's troops close in on the humans, Bill and Judy soon find themselves engaged in an aerial battle with the flying creature...

Mission of Mercy. Realising that the dog-fight with the flying monster has used up most of their plane's fuel, the astronauts and humans set about locating a new supply. But after Bill and Jeff set off in an abandoned gorilla truck, Nova falls seriously ill, and Brent diagnoses her symptoms as Acute Infectious Streptococholus, a highly contagious lung disease – which will kill her within seventy-two hours. In a race against time, Judy leaves in the plane and heads for Ape City, hoping that Zira and Cornelius will be able to help make a serum that will cure Nova...

Invasion of the Underdwellers. Burglars strike Ape City, and valuable items are stolen from the Museum, the Archives, the Library and several homes. The culprits are mysterious, hooded figures – actually General Urko and his gorillas, who have disguised themselves as Underdwellers in the hope of framing them, so that Urko can then convince Doctor Zaius to declare war on them. The leader of the Underdwellers, Krador, turns to Jeff, Bill and Judy for help – but can they find a way to expose Urko's scheme without endangering themselves?

Terror on Ice Mountain. While on an archaeological dig, Cornelius discovers an ancient human book called 'A Day at the Zoo'. After showing it to Zira, the two apes decide to lock it away for safety, knowing that if Urko learnt of its existence, he would have it destroyed. Cornelius finds that the paper he used to wrap the book in is actually an old blueprint for a hot-air balloon; he uses the plans to construct a balloon, only to realise that the section detailing the steering mechanism is missing. Cornelius turns to Bill and Jeff for help, but when Bill sees the book, he asks that it be shown to the public so that the truth of man's past is revealed. However, Cornelius wants to hide the scandalous volume on the mountain of Ghar, where no-one will find it. He and Bill set off in the balloon, only to crash-land during a storm...

Battle of the Titans. After his recent actions and failure to recapture the humans, Urko has been relieved of his duties for three months, and replaced by Colonel Rotok. With Urko gone, Zira and Cornelius decide to risk a trip to the monastic apes living in the mountains, so that they can obtain an ancient book, 'A Day at the Zoo', which proves humans once ruled the planet; they plan to show the volume to the Ape Council in the hope that they will pass a law to grant mankind protection. Meanwhile, Urko convinces Rotok to lead a surprise attack on the humans in New Valley, ensuring that they will both be hailed as heroes. Bill and Cornelius decide to use the hot air balloon to reach the High Llama, demonstrating that apes and humans can work together – while flying through the air, they are attacked by the flying monster...

It is unknown as to what eventually became of the astronauts.

The "Return to the Planet of the Apes" series does not fit well within this or any other time line, because it is originally set in the year 3979, which is too close the movie 'Planet' and 'Beneath'. By placing it in this time period I'd hoped to make it more creditable, considering the human technology the apes use is absent in "Planet" and "Beneath".

By adding the 'Simian Industrial Evolution' period I hoped to explain why the apes are using human technology and the eventual absence of it in the films. It's a feeble attempt to put "Return" within this time line to make it work within the ape mythos.

It would be better if it was not included; it only is because of what it is and what it represents.

January Cornelius, a prominent chimpanzee psychologist and archaeologist, mounts an expedition to New York City's Forbidden Zone with special permission from the National Academy of Science. His goal: to find ancient artefacts proving his theory that the ape evolved from a lower form of primate, possibly man. (Planet)

During several more trips to the desert, Cornelius discovers a cave containing solid evidence of a civilization older than the 12 recorded centuries of ape history. Zaius and the Academy dismiss his theories and his work as heresy—a crime punishable by death—and immediately cancel his travel permit on the grounds that he exceeded his orders. Scared of further damaging his career, Cornelius abandons this line of research for the next year. (Planet)

June 05 Cornelius and Zira get married.

This is based on Zira's pregnancy period, give or take a week.

November 25 The Astræa crashes in an inland sea south of Long Island, in New York's Forbidden Zone. Colonel George Taylor awakens from cryogenic sleep with fellow astronauts Major Robert Landon, Lieutenant Mathew Dodge. A fourth member of the group, Lieutenant Catherine Stewart, has died, her cryogenic chamber cracking in transit. The ship fills with water, and they launch an escape raft and row to shore as the ship sinks to the bottom. Landon wonders what went wrong, as they weren't programmed to land in water. Hitting shore, Taylor checks their provisions while Dodge takes a soil reading. They don't know what planet they're on, but a chrono-reading reveals they've travelled 2,000 years into the future. With only three days' rations, they head out to find food. The trek is a long one, punctuated by sudden lightning storms, but no rain. Large cliffs line deep valleys, and no moon is visible in the luminescent sky. Tensions grow among the men, as Landon's optimism directly contrasts Taylor's cynicism.

Neither man realizes this is still Earth. The land masses of this area have shifted in the past two millennia, and the area is no longer oceanic, but rather endless miles of barren desert.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

The date above was taken from Astræa's chronometer when it crash-landed. Another date was mentioned in 'Beneath' 3955 as the correct date for 'Planet', which I have discounted because I believe it is wrong, (although a lot of POTA fans except this date) and must have been a mistake. I think the people at 20th Century Fox just forgot the original date and made up a new one.

November 28 The astronauts' journey across the barren desert (The Forbidden Zone) to a forested area, where they find representatives of what was once the human race. In a gorilla raid, Taylor and Landon are captured but are separated, and Dodge is killed. (Planet of the Apes)

"We have food and water enough for three days..." "...If there's no life here, we've got just seventy-two hours to find it..." Taylor remarks.

This date is arrived at under the assumption that the two sunsets/sunrises shown constitute the passing of three days, in whole or in part.

December 19 Taylor speaks for the first time. (Planet of the Apes)

This date is arrived at under the assumption that, on average, it takes about three weeks for a simple gunshot wound to heal.

December 20 Cornelius visits Dr. Milo and tells him of Taylor's extraordinary story.

December 25 After finding out more about Taylor, Dr. Milo heads for the Forbidden Zone to find out for himself if the story of Taylor's arrival is true.

December 28 Dr. Milo arrives at Dead Lake and finds the rubber life raft and the American flag.

3979

---

January 01 After about five days of searching Dr. Milo find Taylor's ship the Astræa during a period of low tide lodged on a sand bar and retrieves the Flight Manual and Checklists for study. He begins the journey back to Ape City for equipment to salvage the ship proper.

January 04 Dr. Milo returns to Ape City and later that day carefully begins to gather the equipment and horses needed to salvage the Astræa.

January 07 Dr. Milo heads back to Dead Lake with 12 horses and a wagon full of equipment.

January 10 Dr. Milo returns to the site of the Astræa and waits for low tide the next day to begin his salvage attempt.

January 11 After several attempts, Dr. Milo's 12 horses pull the Astræa off the sand bar and onto shore for further study.

January 12 Using the information in the Flight Manual and Checklists, Dr. Milo is able to revive the ship's onboard computer systems.

January 14 Dr. Milo accesses the Astræa's main computer and learns more of how it is operated.

January 20 Discovering Taylor's unique intelligence, without explanation, ape guards bring Taylor one day to the Ministry of Science to stand before the High Tribunal of the National Academy. Zira and Cornelius serve as his defense, with Zaius, Maximus and the tribunal president sitting in judgment. Appearing for the State is Dr. Honorius, Deputy Minister of Justice, who accuses Zira of working with Galen to alter Taylor's throat surgically. To discredit Taylor's claims, Zaius has all surviving humans from the hunt assembled outside and tells Taylor to identify his fellow talking humans. Landon is there, but a scar reveals he was lobotomized to keep him from speaking. Furious, Taylor rushes at Zaius and is beaten senseless. Zaius claims Landon suffered a skull fracture and could never speak, but Taylor knows he's lying. Zira insists Taylor represents proof of a missing link between their two species, and the outraged council accuses her and Cornelius of contempt for the tribunal, fallacious mischief and scientific heresy. Zaius tells the guards to bring Taylor to his office, where he admits Landon was able to speak and that he doesn't believe they were surgically altered for speech. Demanding Taylor reveal where the rest of his tribe lives beyond the Forbidden Zone, he threatens to emasculate and lobotomize him if he refuses.

Zira and Cornelius are accused of heresy, and help Taylor and Nova escape.
(Planet of the Apes)

"It's been weeks. What happened?" Taylor questions.

This date is arrived at because, according to the script: "Four weeks and three days, and not a word from anyone..." Taylor queries.

January 21 The next morning Zira, Lucius, Taylor and Nova meet Cornelius near the hunting grounds and they head for the Forbidden Zone to the site of an archaeological expedition conducted by Cornelius. (Planet of the Apes)

"You're going back to the Forbidden Zone?" Taylor asks.

"We're going back to the diggings I worked out over a year ago". Cornelius responds.

Dr. Zaius with a squad of gorillas heads to the Forbidden Zone to find the fugitives.

General Ursus sends his scouts into another part of the Forbidden Zone to find the fugitives or any sign of a human colony that Taylor may have come from.

Milo completely reactivates the Astræa.

January 22 The first of General Ursus' gorilla scouts goes missing in the Forbidden Zone.

January 24 Cornelius, Zira, Lucius, Taylor and Nova reach the archaeological dig site. They are followed. Taylor and Nova escape from Zaius and the gorilla patrols farther into the Forbidden Zone. There, Taylor discovers the Statue of Liberty and that he has in fact returned to Earth. (Planet of the Apes)

"It's a three day ride across the desert..." Cornelius tells.

During return trip to Ape City Dr. Zaius strikes a deal with Cornelius and Zira. They agree to be silent about Taylor and their discoveries in return for clemency.

More of General Ursus' gorilla scouts go missing within the Forbidden Zone.

January 25 After wandering the endless desert, Taylor and Nova find a small body of water and stop to quench their thirst. Taylor tries to teach her to say their names, but to no avail. Removing his dog-tag from his neck, he places it around hers as a gift, and then resumes their exploration.

The couple travel the desert for a time, until a great wall of flame suddenly appears, preventing them from going in the direction of New York City. A powerful earthquake and lightning ensue, throwing up a cavern wall to block the way they'd been travelling. Suspicious, Taylor dismounts, telling Nova to find Zira if anything goes wrong. He charges the wall and passes through it, vanishing before her eyes. In shock, Nova begins a long ride back through the desert for Ape City to find Zira. (Beneath)

This date is arrived at under the assumption that the sunset/sunrise shown constitutes the passing of one day, in whole or in part.

Passing through the illusion, Taylor finds himself in the ruins of New York City and makes his way to St. Patrick's Cathedral. Five mutant Inquisitors—Albina, Caspay, Ongaro (also called Negro), Adiposo (also known as Fat Man) and their leader, Mendez XXVI (also called Mendez the Divine and Invincible, a descendant of Mendez the First)—torture him telepathically. The mutants accuse him of spying for the apes and push him to reveal the army's plans, but he knows nothing. They explain that their only weapons (traumatic hypnosis and visual/sonic deterrents) are illusory, and that as the Keepers of the Divine Bomb, they exist only to protect and worship it. Unable to get any further information from him, and convinced of his madness after he claims to be from another time, they lock him up in a cell.

This information appears in 'The Mutant News', a promotional newspaper distributed to moviegoers during the theatrical release of Beneath the Planet of the Apes. Joe Russo's Planet of the Apes Revisited spells Negro's name "Ono Goro," but most resources spell it "Ongaro."

--

The Aurora crash-lands and Major Brent is the only survivor. (Colonel Maddox is rendered blind from the fires and damage of the ship and soon after succumbs to his injuries, and Major Brent buries him). He encounters Nova, lost after Taylor's strange disappearance. (Beneath the Planet of the Apes)

When Brent looked at his ship's chronometer before re-entry the time read 3955, (I would put this down as computer malfunction) as he told Maddox in 'Beneath' when it really was 3979.

"...Earth time reading just before re-entry...3955". Brent informs Maddox.

The Aurora following the Astræa's flight path would probably arrive two months later after its launch date.

January 26 One of General Ursus' scouts' returns from the Forbidden Zone; evidently tortured and delirious, General Ursus uses the incident to declare martial law and begins campaigning for war.

Dr. Milo journeys back to Ape City for supplies and fully confident that he can get the Astræa to fly.

January 27 Dr. Zaius, Cornelius and Zira return to Ape City from the Forbidden Zone; to find Ape City is awash in political and chimpanzee undercurrents.

Dr. Zaius learns that word of Taylor's abilities eventually spreads throughout Ape City, which grows awash in political undercurrents despite Zaius' attempts to quash the ripples.

General Ursus, the new leader of Ape City's military, believes Taylor must hail from a tribe of talking humans living beyond the Forbidden Zone. Powerful and charismatic, he is beyond Zaius' control as he campaigns the Council to let him build a massive army and wage war on the humans.

From the Planet of the Apes #11, 1975 "Outlines of Tomorrow-A Chronology of the Planet of the Apes".

Dr. Zaius allows Cornelius and Zira to read the secret scrolls to show them the true evil of man.

January 28 Brent and Nova arrive at Ape City to find Zira and Cornelius; who are then captured by gorillas. (Beneath the Planet of the Apes)

January 29 The next morning, Nova and Brent escape while being taken for target practice, during pursuit by gorillas they hide in the subway ruins of New York City.

Dr. Milo returns and tells Cornelius and Zira about the Astræa. Sensing the doom of the war's outcome the trio hurriedly gather what supplies they can carry and make haste back to the Forbidden Zone to the Astræa.

General Ursus and Dr. Zaius lead the gorilla war party into the Forbidden Zone.

After some rest Brent and Nova travel down the subway to continue to find Taylor and get away from the gorilla patrol still looking for them. (Beneath the Planet of the Apes)

January 30 By travelling at night to make up some time, Dr. Milo, Cornelius and Zira arrive somewhat fatigued without if any sleep and begin their pre-launch checklist for flight of the Astræa.

We know from statements that Milo is brilliant, but unlike Cornelius, who was an Archaeologist, we don't know what Milo's specialty was. From his musings in 'Escape', it is possible he was a mathematician. Perhaps he discovered some information (possibly aided by Cornelius' discussions with Taylor) in the Forbidden Zone that helped him in his work with the Astræa? Either way, his launching of it was an exceptionally brave thing, since Apes did not believe flight was possible.

The only way Milo, Cornelius and Zira could have reached the Astræa in two days was to travel/ride non-stop. Since 72 hours equal 3 days, and allowing 24 hours for sleeping total under normal conditions. This would mean that Milo, Cornelius and Zira had no sleep or barely little (perhaps while riding) by reaching the Astræa in a flat 48 hours straight, which equals 2 days.

Brent and Nova continue their search and eventually find various tunnels and investigate. Following a high-pitched hum, they travel a modern-built tunnel system that deposits them outside the New York Public Library. Walking the ruins-strewn street, they pass the decimated Stock Exchange building and Radio City Music Hall. Finally, they reach St. Patrick's Cathedral, where Brent feels the sudden urge to drown Nova in a fountain. Fighting it, he enters the church, where a robed verger kneels at the centre, praying to an atomic missile.

Guards bring him to a meeting hall near the Lexington Avenue subway at Grand Central Station, passing a group of mutant children singing "Ring around the Neutron." Five mutant Inquisitors—Albina, Caspay, Ongaro (also called the Negro), Adiposo (also known as Fat Man) and their leader, Mendez XXVI (Mendez the Divine and Invincible, a descendant of Mendez the First)—torture him telepathically, accusing him of spying for the apes and pushing him to reveal their plans.

As the Keepers of the Divine Bomb, they exist only to protect and worship it. Having failed to read the apes' minds, they force him to violate Nova, determined to make him reveal what the apes are up to. Eventually, he breaks down and tells them that the apes will attack their city.

As the mutants prepare for an imminent ape attack, General of Defense Ygli VII trains citizens in the use of such mental deterrents as brain torture and mind dissuasion. These deterrents are expected to stop the apes at the boundaries of the Forbidden Zone.

This information appears in 'The Mutant News', a promotional newspaper distributed to moviegoers during the theatrical release of Beneath the Planet of the Apes.

Out in the desert, the mutants try to scare the gorilla war party with illusions of fire, suffering gorillas and a bleeding statue of the Lawgiver. Zaius proves it's a lie, and they march on until the gorilla war party ride up over a rise and sees the ruins of New York City.

Mendez XXVI calls a Public Thought Protection, sending all children indoors and all adults to the cathedral to have their final ceremonial worship. After singing "Psalm of Mendez", the mutants remove the masks from their faces, revealing their diseased, hairless flesh in deference to the bomb. Mendez says to clear the streets, hoping the apes will think the city empty.

Caspay and Ongaro take Brent to a cell, saying they can't let him go since he knows too much. George Taylor is there, and Ongaro mentally forces them to fight to the death.

Nova sees them and cries out "Taylor!" distracting Ongaro long enough for Brent and Taylor to impale him on a spiked wall; removing his mask, Ongaro dies praying to his God. Brent tells Taylor about the missile, which Taylor recognizes as the Alpha-Omega, a doomsday bomb created in the 20th century to destroy the entire world.

Meanwhile, the gorilla war party enters New York City to begin their assault. They travel the subway tracks to Grand Central Station. Brent, Taylor and Nova hide as an ape looks through a cell window, and then set out to disarm the bomb. A passing ape shoots Nova, destroying Taylor's last hope for the future.

The apes decimate a series of busts honoring the House of Mendez's long lineage, and then burst through the cathedral doors. Mendez XXVI stands before them, arming the 'Alpha-Omega'. As Taylor and Brent watch from the shadows, Ursus' troops kill Mendez and pull the missile down with ropes.

The astronauts try to stop them, but Ursus shoots Taylor, who falls from a balcony. Brent shoots Ursus, and is himself pierced by multiple gunshots.

Taylor, barely alive, begs Zaius to help him stop the killing, but when Zaius responds with anti-human rhetoric.

Taylor pitches forward onto the detonator, activating the 'Alpha-Omega' bomb in his last defiant act. The resultant explosion destroys all life on the planet.

"...burn the planet to a cinder..." Taylor comments.

The 'Alpha-Omega' nuclear bomb, originally stored in the vaults of a San Francisco missile complex and cherished by twenty generations by the House of Mendez, is detonated while in St Patrick's Cathedral in the ruins of New York City.

"But we saw the Earth destroyed..." Cornelius explains. (Escape From the Planet of the Apes)

--

A catalytic reaction spreads across the globe in minutes. Shockwaves of the blast are sent into space and strike the Astræa containing Doctors Milo, Cornelius and Zira. The ship is thrown into a Hasslein Curve, 'a bend in time', and cast back to...
(Escape From the Planet of the Apes)

---

Author's Note

---

As stated above the Earth has been destroyed, but with my Fan Fiction story "Resurrection of the Planet of the Apes" the 'Alpha-Omega' bomb was successfully re-configured; thus the bomb did go off, but it only destroyed everything within a 25 mile radius. So what Doctors' Milo, Cornelius and Zira really saw (perhaps not very clearly and so presumed) was a very bright flash on the surface of the planet, which they could've interpreted as the destruction of the Earth that didn't happen.

Author's Note:

* Based on actor Paul Stevens birthday on 17 January 1921 until his death on 4 June 1986. (Battle for the Planet of the Apes)

** When Mendez died his son Mendez II was only 12 years old, so Janus was elected the leader regent until Mendez turned 20 to take over his duties as the 'Keeper of the Faith'.

*** Based on actor Paul Richards birthday on 23 November 1924 until his death on 10 December 1974. (Beneath the Planet of the Apes)

Other yearly figures are based on the current world average lifespan of human beings which equals 67.00 years, including the age of 21 which I believe, would be a good reasonable age for Mendez to marry and produce his son and heir to continue the lineage.

Author's Note:

As you can see by my Timeline Table there have been 94 'Keeper of the Faith' oath of Office, Spiritual Leaders; 26 of them are Mendez, the last being Mendez 93 from his family, becoming Mendez XXVI. This may sound confusing but think of the Kings and Queens and even the Pope, where titles are concerned and inherited, e.g. the 93rd Mendez is the 93rd male bearing the name Mendez (his family name) but he is the 26th Mendez to inherit the title of the 'Keeper of the Faith' and thus be elected in turn as the Spiritual Leader of the 'Alpha-Omega' bomb and the Senior Guardian Leader of his mutant underworld commune. As you can see there are 19 Periods, each Period contains 1 leader/heir of their house, thus each complete election cycle of Houses is called a Period. Only Periods 1 and 19 break this transitional cycle.

THE HOUSES OF THE UNDERDWELLERS

Author's Note:

There are five major houses or dynasties which developed amongst the mutants after the Nuclear War in 2006; after Governor Kolp died in 2018 trying to destroy Caesar's settlement, the houses only came into prominence and thus were fully developed after about 110 years when Mendez VI decided to reorganise the underdweller commune to best suit its needs, thus stabilising and increasing safeguards to protect the mutant society and the Alpha-Omega bomb, which had become their God—a symbol of worship, if it fell into the ape hands and/or just in case his family were no longer able to perform their duties (possibly dying out from their inherit radiation exposure). Thus along with Mendez, four other houses/dynasties were formed from the original scientists who survived the Nuclear War; these descendents (their children) introduced a hierarchy within their underworld society to help maintain their existence and survival. With the exception to Periods 1 and 19, each house took turns in being the commune's leader as well as it's spiritual leader with regards to their God (The Alpha-Omega bomb), having the title of the 'Keeper of the Faith'.
