

SHOWTIME

PLANET OF THE APES

A CBS TELEVISION SERIES

View-Master Reel A

A1 In a deserted woods an old man wearing tattered homespun clothes slept under a tree.

"Go get him, dog!" someone yelled. As a yelping dog charged, Farrow awoke in terror and scrambled up the tree.

"What did you find, dog?!" asked Arno, a young chimpanzee, emerging from the shrubs. Reaching the tree, he looked up. "That's enough, dog! It's only a human," he sighed.

© 1967 APJAC Productions, Inc. and Twentieth Century Fox Film Corp. II 507

A2 A blast of wind, a roar, a flash of light followed by a tremendous crash dazed Arno.

In a clearing nearby Arno saw a strange object shaped something like a giant bullet. Unseen behind him, the human, Farrow looked in wonderment.

He stared a moment, then ran back into the woods, headed for Chalo, a village of human farmers and laborers, to report to his father, Veska, Prefect of the village.

"Come on, dog!" he yelled.

A5 Carefully, one by one, he removed the two survivors from the still-smoking cockpit. He had hidden Burke and was carrying Virdon on his shoulders when he heard the hoofbeats of galloping horses.

Only apes rode horses—it must be a search party from the village of Chalo.

Panting, Farrow dragged Virdon through the shrubs to a rotting hidden door, which stood ajar.

A3 Farrow cautiously emerged from the woods, gazing in wonder at the strange smooth object that lay smoking on the ground.

Fearful, but with great curiosity, he inspected the object, found a lever, pulled it. Terrified by a loud crackling, he dashed away, stopped short to watch a section lift away to make an entrance.

A4 With great caution, Farrow entered the object and stood in awe of the many dials, instruments, and blinking red and green eerie lights.

Strapped in contour seats, three humans dressed in white sat slumped over—Jones, Virdon, and Burke.

Farrow carefully examined Jones, listening for a heartbeat. He was dead.

Sadly Farrow turned to Virdon and Burke. Finding them still alive, he smiled.

A6 As Farrow pulled Virdon into an old shelter, Veska, Arno, and three gorillas rode up to the sandpit.

Two uniformed gorillas kept guns ready as Veska and Turvo entered the strange white object, amazed by its interior—and Jones.

"It's a human!" Arno cried, watching his father from outside the entrance. "There were two others! I wonder where they are?"

"We'll find them," Turvo said menacingly.

Veska ordered Turvo to ride to Central City with a note for Zaius, Chief Councillor.

A7 Meanwhile, in the shelter, Virdon and Burke came to, looked around in a daze. Suddenly Virdon concealed himself beside the door, almost attacking Farrow, who entered offering fresh fruit.

"Who're you? Where are we?" Virdon asked.

"This is for eating," Farrow reassured.

Veska speaks to a crowd of humans about two strangers who are insane. He tells them not to believe the stories that these people tell.

View-Master Reel B

B1 In his study in Central City, Zaius, dressed in brown robes, and his young assistant, Galen, received Veska's note.

"Humans aren't technicians. This message is fantasy," Galen said, puzzled.

"Destruction isn't fantasy!" Zaius shouted suddenly. "You have a great deal to learn!"

Back in Chalo, Veska warned an assembly of humans to beware of dangerous strangers.

B4 Carrying his precious book, Farrow led the astronauts back to the ship where they spied an armed gorilla on guard.

"I'll get rid of him," Farrow rushed out shouting that he had seen two humans. "Come on! You can catch them!"

With the way cleared, Virdon and Burke ran to the ship and climbed inside. The chronometer read the year as 3085—more than a thousand years in the future! Hearing a shot ring out, they raced out of the ship and saw Farrow bleeding on the ground.

Something clicked behind them, and they whirled to face two gorillas with aimed rifles. From horseback, Urko and Galen watched.

B5 As the gorillas finished tying Virdon and Burke on horses, Urko approached. Burke protested about leaving Farrow to die.

Urko, outraged by the complaint, whirled and clubbed him, then aimed his gun. "I can do what I want, human!"

"Urko! No!" Galen cried. Urko glared.

As the gorillas moved out with their captives, Virdon asked Galen to see to Farrow. Finding him dead, he picked up Farrow's book.

Disturbed by the news of the spaceship, Zaius mused over a small grenade acquired from other humans who landed a ship years ago. He recalled a frequent nightmare in which fantastic humans built complex machinery all designed for destruction.

With Galen, Zaius took the message to Security Chief Urko, a burly gorilla.

B2 "Another ship?!" Urko exclaimed angrily. "The humans must be found and killed! Like the others."

"Not before questioning them," Zaius said. Over Urko's grumbling, Zaius told of the other astronauts' great knowledge and feelings of independence and freedom. "We have to learn how they think—I want the astronauts alive for now," Zaius insisted.

Ordered to go with Urko, Galen said, "It's a shame they have to be killed at all."

B3 In the shelter, Virdon and Burke donned clothes like those worn by human villagers. They learned that the apes controlled the planet. "Are there any humans on the High Council?" Burke asked, bewildered.

"Humans are nothing. They've always been nothing. Except in story books," Farrow explained, removing a worn old book from its hiding place.

Stunned by a picture of the New York City skyline, the astronauts realized they could not "go home"—they were already on Earth!

Virdon and Burke concluded they must have gone through a time warp. Anxiously they awaited morning, planning to check the ship's chronometer.

The space ship chronometer read 3085 A.D..

B6 In the Council Room, the astronauts were questioned by Zaius, Urko, and other apes. Urko insisted that enemies of the state must be put to death immediately—no questions!

When Virdon said he believed all creatures were equal and should learn to live and work together, a great uproar resulted.

"Silence! Silence!" Zaius shouted.

B7 To demonstrate his point, Urko took a grenade stolen from Zaius' study and blew out the door. "Would an ape build such a thing?!" he asked.

Zaius and the others agreed the astronauts' minds had to be probed.

Momentarily defeated, Urko glared furiously.

View-Master Reel C

C1 Bothered by a picture in Farrow's book, Galen asked Zaius whether there was ever a time when humans controlled the world and apes were kept behind bars.

"That's heresy. I could have you imprisoned for that," Zaius answered tensely.

Unsatisfied, Galen visited the astronauts and learned of a world beyond his imagination.

Desperate to obtain the flight control record from the ship so they could somehow return home, Virdon asked Galen's help in escaping. Galen refused, but asked to come back later to talk more about the book.

C2 That night, Virdon and Burke were sitting forlornly on the floor when the guard pushed in a bowl of food, leaving the door ajar.

Suspecting a trap, the astronauts swung the door open slowly and hesitated inside.

C4 The astronauts used Zaius as a decoy to lure the guard outside the prison.

"Call him!" Virdon commanded Zaius.

When the guard stepped out, Burke clubbed him. Working fast, they bound and gagged Zaius and looked through the guard's pockets for a key to Galen's cell. Finding none, they moved off down the corridor.

Galen's face appeared at the opening in a cell door. "What are you doing here?!"

C5 Discovering that Urko kept the keys, Virdon contemplated the grenade in his hand. He told Galen to lie on the floor in the corner, face down, with his hands over his head.

Virdon set the grenade and placed it at the cell door. Both ran down the corridor. As they hit the floor—WHAMMM!!

"Come on!" Burke said, pulling Galen out of the cell.

The astronauts and their new chimp friend, Galen, zigzagged through the woods with the flight control disc, hoping to find a way back through the time warp, somehow.

They comforted each other for the long adventure that lay ahead. "Which way, Galen?" Virdon asked. "It's your world." "Now it is yours too," Galen answered.

© GAF Corporation, New York, N.Y., U.S.A. T.M. Reg. U.S. Pat. Off. Marzec Deposee. Marc Reg. Printed in U.S.A.

SEE AND ENJOY OTHER STEREO PICTURES OF

- |         |             |                 |
|---------|-------------|-----------------|
| Kung Fu | The Waltons | Hawaii Five-0   |
| Adam-12 | Happy Days  | The Six-Million |
| Mannix  | Emergency   | Dollar Man      |

gaf VIEW-MASTER
Stereo Pictures
GAF CORPORATION
PORTLAND, OREGON 97207

Ask for complete list of over 500 picture subjects.

C3 Galen, coming to visit the "talking" humans, saw gorilla guards about to shoot Virdon and Burke at the door. Galen shouted, "Run run!" and jumped the guard with the rifle.

The astronauts escaped in the confusion, but now had to rescue Galen. Stealing into Zaius' study, they demanded his cooperation, threatening him with a grenade.

"You'll destroy me as your kind once destroyed its world!" Zaius said angrily.

C6 Hearing the blast, Urko and two gorilla guards who came running from another area found a jagged hole instead of a cell door.

Rushing out of the prison they peered into the dark, but the fugitives were not in sight.

C7 After hiding out for several days, Virdon, Burke, and Galen returned to a deserted spaceship. The interior had been demolished.

While Burke and Galen stood watch, Virdon tried frantically to remove the magnetic flight control disc, which held their future.

Galen heard galloping horses, and Burke shouted, "They're coming. Hurry!"

The three quickly fled the ship.

VIEW-MASTER Reels add the realism of stereo to the beauty of color to make pictures "Come to Life."

Each Packet contains three 7-scene Reels — or twenty-one full-color three-dimensional pictures.

PLANET OF THE APES

A CBS Television Series

STORY DESCRIPTION

Astronauts Virdon and Burke survive the crash of their spaceship to discover they have passed through a time warp and landed in a distant future year, on a planet ruled by apes!

A young chimp witnesses the crash and rushes back to Chalo, where simple humans labor, to report to his father, Vesko, Prefect of the village. "Humans know their place—that mustn't change!" he tells his son, Arno, roughly. The apes consider humans dangerous, for they stand for death and destruction!

Zaius, an orangutan and Chief Councillor of governmental offices, orders gorilla Security Chief Urko to take Virdon and Burke alive—for questioning. Thrown into a crude prison, the astronauts survive Urko's plot to kill them and struggle desperately to free themselves from the apes.

Enclosed order form lists hundreds of titles including U.S. Picture Tours, National Parks, Famous Cities, Classic Children's Stories, Nations of the World, Science and Arts, Bible Stories, TV Favorites, and Historical Subjects.

gaf VIEW-MASTER
Stereo Pictures
GAF CORPORATION
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10020

© GAF Corporation, New York, N.Y., U.S.A. T.M. Reg. U.S. Pat. Off. Marzec Deposee. Marc Reg. Printed in U.S.A.

© 1957 APJAC Productions, Inc. and Twentieth Century Fox Film Corp.

Packet No. B 507